Survey asks: do you want a Superblock?

by MIKE ZAREMBA

More than 7,000 questionnaires are finding their way into the homes of the 6th, 7th and 3rd wards.

The subject: Superblock.

The reason: Ald. Carmen Sarlo (6th), Ald. Gerald Meyer (7th) and Ald. Spence Chase (3rd) want to find out from the people. They want to know if the taxpayers want Superblock.

"Many people I have talked to in my ward don't want Superblock. Nobody has asked the people about this. No one has made an earnest effort to find out what the taxpayers feel about the proposals on Superblock. And this is what we are trying to do," Sarlo said.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE states: "Within the next 10 days the city council will vote whether to approve the downtown redevelopment proposal, Superblock. This decision will determine the direction of development of the downtown area, and will affect the entire city."

"The developers are asking for considerable changes in our zoning ordinances. This letter is an attempt to obtain the opinions of the people," Meyer said.

Meyer said the questionnaire is going out to the different wards, "not just one," to get a sampling from different areas in Des Plaines.

"I think this decision should involve the people. It is no longer just my opinion, the mayor's opinion or another alderman's," Sarlo said. "Over the weekend I've received a few questionnaires already answered." Sarlo said the answers he has so far received show the people are opposed to Superblock. He said he is hoping to get "at least 800" answered from his ward.

Sarlo and Meyer both have voted against past Superblock proposals.

THE THREE aldermen want the opinions of their constituents. The questions they are asking go as follows:

- Are you in favor of granting the 200-foot building height variation requested by the developer? (Present ordinance: 100-foot limit.)
- For this Phase I (Superblock), are you in favor of granting the waiver of $435,000 that the developer would contribute to the city in lieu of providing his own off-street parking?
- Over the next few years, should the city build multiple-tiered parking garages adjacent to, and over the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks from Graceland Street to River Road?
- Should the city begin major redevelopment projects before the downtown traffic problems are solved?
- In any redevelopment proposal, should the city basically adhere to its zoning ordinances?
- Should the city adopt the proposed "City Comprehensive Plan" before proceeding with a redevelopment project of this scope? (The comprehensive plan has been in committee for two years.)

"I'm a cautious cat," Sarlo has said. "Economics says this is feasible. What would happen if economics reversed."

MEYER HAS SAID that without the redevelopment project the city could spend the $600,000 to be used on the Prairie Street widening and sewer work for other city projects.

Meyer said he is urging his constituents to return the questionnaire to him before July 15, since the city council will vote on Superblock July 16.

All the questionnaires will be tabulated and presented to the aldermen, Sarlo said, "giving them an idea for once as to what the people want."

Sarlo said this is the first time in his ward any alderman has attempted to use this method in getting public opinion. "Maybe some of the other aldermen might try getting a questionnaire out."

WHEELCHAIR ATHLETE Sam Turpin, 400 W. Touhy, Des Plaines, wheeled himself from downtown Des Plaines to Lake Michigan Fourth of July for sponsors who helped pay his trip to International Paralympics in England. Sam is seen here in Evanston. He needed $300. And he didn't quite make it.

Turpin, Vandello off to Paralympics

Wheelchair athletes making it big

In a few days they will be among the 35 men representing the United States. They will spend a week in London, England competing against Argentina, Great Britain, Israel, Sweden and many other countries.

And they will come home, maybe with a gold medal. It would be nice to win a few like last year, but the important thing is that they made it. They can come home, knowing they were among the best wheelchair athletes in the United States and that they competed in the International Paralympics.

SAM TURPIN of Des Plaines and Don Vandello have traveled a long road. There were hundreds of hours of practice, trying different methods, different wheelchairs, different styles.

They competed in regional conferences. Then there was the national meet in New York, where they battled it out against 350 other wheelchair athletes to qualify for the international competition.

To pay traveling expenses to go to England they pushed their wheelchairs from downtown Des Plaines to Lake Michigan on the 4th of July, seeking sponsors for the $600 trip.

The easiest way to get the money would have been to ask for donations, but they didn't do that. They wanted to show people they were willing to work for any contributions.

AND THEY DID just that. On the Fourth of July, a hot, sunny day, they pushed their wheelchairs over 15 miles of sidewalks. Don Vandello is a distance athlete and he went 30 miles.

They got a lot of stares and caused a few traffic jams. There were a few close calls with cars while crossing intersections. One of their friends came along for the trip, "just for the exercise." He pushed 30 miles.

"We wanted to show people we could put forth some effort on our own," Don said. "Instead of going out and just asking for donations I wanted to show people this was a worthwhile cause. I wanted to prove to them I was serious," Sam said.

THEY DIDN'T get all the money they needed, but they're still going. Last year when they had their pushathon, there wasn't any problem getting contributions. "Maybe the novelty wore off," Don said, "but I'm still thankful for the people who helped out."

Sam said the people he did see were "nice and very helpful." "I want to thank all the people who sponsored me." He said one of the reasons they didn't get enough contributions was probably that "we only had a few weeks to get started after we found out we were officially selected to go to England."

Both Sam and Don will play on the 10-man basketball team for the United States. Both have won gold medals for basketball and they'll try to do it again.

Sam also will compete in the 100-meter dash, the slalom and the pentathlon, a five event competition involving — archery, racing, javelin, swimming and the shotput.

Don is entered in the 100-meter and 240-meter races and the slalom.

WHILE IN England, Sam and Don, like the other 33, will have the same advantage as the U.S. Olympic athletes. When they take the basketball court or the track and field grounds, their adrenalin will start to flow stronger and harder than athletes from the other countries.

This happens because, although they are representing the U.S., they had to practice, work and earn their own way to get to London. Some of the other countries sponsor and pay their representatives. Some have training camps, with professional coaches.

Last year, without the training camps and coaches and without ever playing before as an organized team, the U.S. wheelchair basketball team beat the Israeli team in the last few seconds of the championship game. They took the world title by one point. The Israeli team had been playing together for more than four years, while the U.S. team had been together for one week.

The only difference between the Olympics and the Paralympics — the wheelchair.

SAM AND DON have been working for many years preparing for different events and staying in shape. Both are polio victims. They met and became good friends while playing for the Chicago Sidewinders, a basketball team that competes in the National Wheelchair Association Conference.

They are both married and their wives will be going with them to the international meet.

They have pushed a long way. The payoff will come in a few days.

Help Sam and Don

Help Sam Turpin and Don Vandello get to England and represent the United States in the International Paralympics.

The two are short about $200. If you'd like to contribute send checks to Sam Turpin in care of the Des Plaines Herald, 1333 Prairie St., Des Plaines 60016.

Holiday week vandalism bursts

Several acts of vandalism and damage to property were reported to Des Plaines police during the Fourth of July holiday.

Police said $300 damage was done to A Little Bit Antiques, 1692 River Rd., when vandals tore down the store's front sign. Police believe the damage occurred late Tuesday.

In another incident, vandals caused $100 damage to Brentwood Elementary School, 260 Dulles Rd., early Thursday, according to police.

A witness told police he saw several youths prop a bike rack up against the building and climb to the roof where they smashed several skylight windows.

Another $200 damage was caused when rock-throwing vandals smashed a picture window at the house of Harold Petersen, 1449 Fifth Ave., said police.

Police believe the vandals struck early Wednesday. Petersen was not home at the time.

A third window-smashing took place at the 877 S. Elmhurst Rd. Tastee Freez, said police. The damage was discovered Thursday morning by an employe. Police said the damage totaled $150.

Another local resident told police vandals caused $150 damage to his car after smashing his windshield Thursday.

Police said Jack Budz,, 242 Kincaid Ct., had left the auto in city Parking Lot No. 2 on Prairie Street when the incident occurred.

Mayor 'feels fine,' but . . .

Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel was described in fair condition Sunday in Holy Family Hopital Sunday after a weekend stay there for what doctors said may be a bleeding ulcer.

Behrel was taken to the hospital Friday morning after he had passed out while shaving.

"I don't even know why they're keeping me here," Behrel said yesterday. "I feel fine. So far they haven't found anything wrong with me."

A hospital spokesman said the mayor was doing well and should be going home before "too much longer."

"We can't say anymore than he is here, doing fine and his condition is fair," the spokesman said.

Home loans may get tighter, more expensive

Banks, savings & loans to pay higher interest rates

by LEA TONKIN

The good news for small savers this week is that banks and savings and loan associations can boost their interest rates on many types of accounts. But the bad news is that this will tighten the supply of money available for mortgage loans, squeezing out the home buyers with small down payments.

The Federal Reserve Board and Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. announced on Wednesday that the maximum interest allowed on passbook accounts offered by banks is raised from 4½ per cent to 5 per cent. There are similar increases for certificates of deposit, in which a saver agrees to leave a specified amount of money in the institution for a certain length of time. These limits are retroactive to July 1.

Savings and loan associations were advised on Wednesday by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board that they can soon raise their passbook rate from 5 to 5.25 per cent. The ceiling on interest rates for mortgages backed by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) and the Veterans Administration (VA) will go from 7 to 7¾ per cent. For the FHA, this won't happen until the Congress completes the technicality of renewing the government's mortgage authority, which expired June 30.

ACCORDING TO James T. Lynn, secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), buyers of FHA and VA-backed homes will end up paying the same amount of interest because the number of "points" charged on a loan will be reduced. Points are a percentage of the mortgage amount charged on a one time basis.

The interest ceiling changes are pegged to generally rising interest rates over the last few months. This week, the prime rate was boosted by a number of New Jersey banks from 8 to 8½ per cent. This is expected to be followed by most major U. S. banks.

The home buyer and the home builder may be squeezed out of many markets because of the rising interest rates, said Robert Widdicombe Jr., executive director of the Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago. He seconded the criticism leveled by the National Association of Home Builders and the National League of Insured Savings Associations that the interest rate actions are inflationary.

"Any time you raise the prime rate or the discount rate or these other rates, it affects those who live off borrowed money," said Widdicombe. This increases the home builder's cost for land acquisition and construction financing. When the home buyer wants a mortgage, it jacks up the cost again, he said, adding, "If the cost becomes excessive, fewer people will be able to afford it."

"IMPORTANTLY, we start to press against the usury ceiling in our state which is 8 per cent," Widdicombe added. "If the lender is unwilling to lend his money at 8 per cent this simply reduces the amount of money available for mortgages. Money goes where the action is. If there are alternative investments, lenders migrate to those areas."

The last time interest rates climbed as high was in the 1969-1970 period, when the mortgage money dried up for many home buyers in Illinois. This credit crunch hurts the marginal buyer with the small down payment, said Widdicombe.

The Cook County Council of Insured Savings Association conducted a survey of its membership yesterday, and the first indications were that the majority of S&L's were against the new interest ceilings. Paul Downing, president, said the current lack of savings outflows to higher paying investments indicates that a higher savings rate will not draw more customers to S&L's. "In addition, the usury laws in Illinois still do not permit mortgages above 8 per cent and consequently such an interest rate on savings interest, if adopted universally in Illinois, could put many savings and loans in a cost and reserves squeeze," he said.

A NUMBER OF banks had already begun raising their passbook interest rates yesterday. This could narrow the relative advantage of S&L's in interest rates over commercial banks.

"We heard the news at 5 p.m. on Wednesday and immediately raised our rates to the legal limit," said Lee Morrison, president of the Palatine National Bank in Palatine. "We're also anticipating that the 8½ per cent prime rate will be adopted by other banks and also that it could go higher."

This move by banks hurts S&L's, he conceded, because they're stuck with long term investments (mortgages) as compared to many of the bank investments. "Most home mortgages are going to become unavailable, for a few months," he said.

Higher interest rates will benefit small savers who have not been able to make as much in interest as the large investors, said Morrison. This temporary boost in rates should peak out this fall, he predicts, with a sharp downturn later in the year.

Bollacker case

Murder suspect escaped state school

by JOHN MAES

A suspect charged in the June 28 shooting of Richard Bollacker, of Chicago escaped two years ago from the Illinois State Training School in St. Charles where he was in custody, according to Alfred Buscher, the school's superintendent.

Richard "Ricky" Del Moro, 18, of 4733 Palmer Ave., in Chicago, one of three men charged in the slaying, was sent to the school in October, 1971, following his arrest in connection with a murder.

The charge against him was later reduced to involuntary manslaughter.

According to Buscher, Del Moro, then 16, fled the institution little more than a month after arriving at St. Charles.

The youth ran from the school's gymnasium, probably during a recreation period, said Buscher, and escaped the medium-security facility.

"Field services and all local police, including Chicago authorities, were immediately notified after the escape," he said.

BUSCHER CITED no statistics as to how many youths have tried to escape but said, "some try to get away but we get about 90 per cent of them back."

Several school staff members participated in a search for Del Moro, said Buscher.

The school provides vocational training and education for about 270 delinquent youths. Del Moro was in vocational training when he escaped, according to Buscher.

Buscher said the gang structure is played down at the school as much as possible. Instead, youths are encouraged to identify with other boys in their living quarters, or cottages through intramural sports and other activities.

Del Moro, Murphy and Peter Mukite, 21, of 1823 Haddon St., also charged in the murder, were members of a Chicago street gang known as the Playboys.

DEL MORO was arrested July 1, at the apartment of a friend, Jerry Thurbush, 5300 Dakin St., by Chicago police acting on an informant's tip. Also arrested in connection with the death were John Murphy, 17, 5514 Augusta Blvd., and an unidentified Oak Park girl, 16.

Del Moro, Murphy and Mukite, were named as suspects by Bollacker's girlfriend, Cindy Graf, 16, 2424 Dempster St., in Des Plaines.

Miss Graf told police she witnessed Bollacker's shotgun death near Rand and Ballard Roads in Des Plaines. The suspects also severely beat the girl before fleeing, police said.

Mukite was captured outside Del Moro's home by Des Plaines police the next day.

The three are currently being held without bond in Cook County Jail. The Oak Park girl was turned over to Chicago Juvenile authorities and is awaiting a court decision on whether she will face trial as an adult.

CHICAGO POLICE charged Thurbush with aiding Del Moro and Murphy when the two were arrested three days after the slaying. He was ordered held in Cook County Jail on $10,000 bond.

The bond was reduced to $5,000 Friday by Associate Judge Marvin Peters in Des Plaines Branch of Cook County Circuit Court. He was later released.

Judge Peters also ordered Thurbush, 21, returned to the Des Plaines circuit court branch for a hearing Thursday. Mukite, Del Moro and Murphy have also been scheduled for a Thursday court appearance.

Heidelberg professor to speak at YMCA

Hans Adolph Heinrich, professor of Heidelberg University and consultant to Argonne National Laboratory, will speak at the 20th annual meeting of the Northwest Suburban YMCA in Des Plaines on Thursday, at 6:30 p.m.

Besides Heinrich's humorous talk, other features will include the dedication of the instruction swimming pool to William J. Busse, former chairman of the YMCA board of directors, election of officers for 1973-74, and elections of new members of the board of directors. Recognition will also be made of those with long service records. The YMCA boasts the largest membership in the country and accounts for one of every eight YMCA members in the Chicago area.

Stephen Jurco, chairman of the present board of directors, will summarize the past year's progress and will talk about plans for the coming years. Arrangements of the meeting are being planned by Richard Bueschel and Joseph Lesniak. Reservations for dinner may be made by calling 296-3376.

Township GOP asked employe cash 'gifts'

by BOB LAHEY
and KURT BAER

Wheeling Township highway department employes were asked to contribute for membership in the Wheeling Township Republican Organization at a brief meeting at which their paychecks were distributed.

Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen confirmed to the Herald Friday he summoned his highway crew shortly before quitting time a week ago Friday. He said the purpose of the meeting, as in previous such meetings, was "to make announcements."

The announcements at this meeting included a call for volunteers to drive vehicles in the July 4 parade of the Prospect Heights Lions Club, and a request for memberships in the township GOP organization.

Olsen said that "it was maybe imprudent of me" to ask for memberships at the same time he handed out paychecks, but he emphasized that he informed the workers that the contributions were strictly voluntary.

BY THE FOLLOWING Monday, all the five full-time and eight part-time employes of the department had made contributions of $2 for single memberships or $3 for family memberships, Olsen said.

Another full-time employe, who had not yet contributed, was discharged the day following the membership announcement "for insubordination," Olsen said.

The highway commissioner declined to discuss the circumstances of the firing, on the advice of Township Attorney Richard A. Cowen, who also is Republican township committeeman.

The employe told the Herald he was fired following a dispute with Olsen after the employe saw an "unofficial car" leaving the township garage on Saturday evening. The employe, who had worked for the department for about three years, said he followed the car and did not know the driver was Olsen until Olsen parked at his residence.

HE SAID OLSEN told him he had been washing his car at the garage, and when the employe "stated the irregularity of the act," he was fired.

Olsen said he had been testing new car-washing equipment, recently installed, so that he could demonstrate it to department employes on Monday.

The employe made no charge that his discharge was related to the membership solicitation, and Olsen stated emphatically that it was not.

Olsen said he repeated the request for GOP memberships at the highway garage Monday and that all the employes contributed "except one man who said he had forgotten about it and asked if he could bring the money the next day." Olsen said he told the man the membership drive would be over by then, but that he would put the money in and the employe could pay him back later.

At that time, he said, only the fulltime employes were informed of the firing.

Cowen told the Herald it is "absolutely not" the policy to condition "employment, payment or promotions" of township employes on political contributions.

"IN RETROSPECT, (Olsen) was unwise in mentioning membership at a meeting at which paychecks were distributed," said Cowen. "But I'm sure that he is aware that the decision of an employe to participate or not can have absolutely no bearing on his employment."

Lawrence Carrozza, former highway commissioner who is still employed with the department, said in his 13 years with the department there had been no request of employes for contributions to the GOP organization, but he added that he saw nothing wrong in asking for membership dues on a voluntary basis.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she was "very, very surprised" that employes had been asked at work to contribute to the party and said it was "absolutely not" an acceptable recruitment practice.

But women's lib is something else

Era of white middle-class Dick and Jane readers ends

by REGINA OEHLER

No more white, middle-class suburban Dick and Jane. Those two old school buddies have left Dist. 62 and entered the never, never-land where all old school books go.

Next fall, first graders will be reading about Bing and Sandy — and Kevin and Jan, blacks and whites and Puerto Ricans.

After 28 years with the Scott, Foresman and Co. series, the Des Plaines Elementary School District has elected to use another series put out by Harcourt Brace Jovanovich Co.

Assistant Supt. Robert Cowell said the new series was chosen primarily because it requires less detailed management and includes less supplemental work, such as spelling tests, in the early grades.

It was not chosen, he said, because minority groups are represented. "There is no major reading series out that does not include minority groups," Cowell said.

IT WAS DEFINITELY not chosen because it reflected the women's lib movement, this reporter found out after reading stacks of the new books.

Though a white, Stan, plays with a black, Greg, and a Puerto Rican, Carla, wanders through some of the stories, moms and little old ladies haven't changed a bit.

Dads may have longer hair and use slang ("jiving"), but mommies are still terrified by frogs and snakes. The only type of job women hold in this series is that of teachers.

And there aren't any daddies that stay home while mommy goes off to work.

THERE IS ONE man, though, that doesn't wash his dishes. He finally meets up with a rainstorm, takes his dirty dishes outside and everything ends happily.

The textbook mommy spends her days at home with the children. She may take care of the baby or be in the kitchen cooking. In fact, the textbook mommies spend a lot of their time wearing aprons.

And then there's those lovable little old ladies — though they may act senile, they really don't LOOK that old.

Miss (not Ms.) Poppy forgets things. She sits down on her chair, trying to remember what she did with her umbrella. Finally, she realizes she's sitting on that big, black umbrella.

Then she takes her umbrella shopping. It starts pouring. Miss Poppy gets wet, her cake gets wet, and everything she buys gets wet. When she gets home, she realizes she never even opened that big, black umbrella.

And who else but Miss Poppy would water her garden and take good care of it; then suddenly realize she's forgotten to plant the seeds? Who else goes to a party with flowers — and bees — in her hat?

THE ONLY FUNNY little old man is the one who's too lazy to wash his dishes.

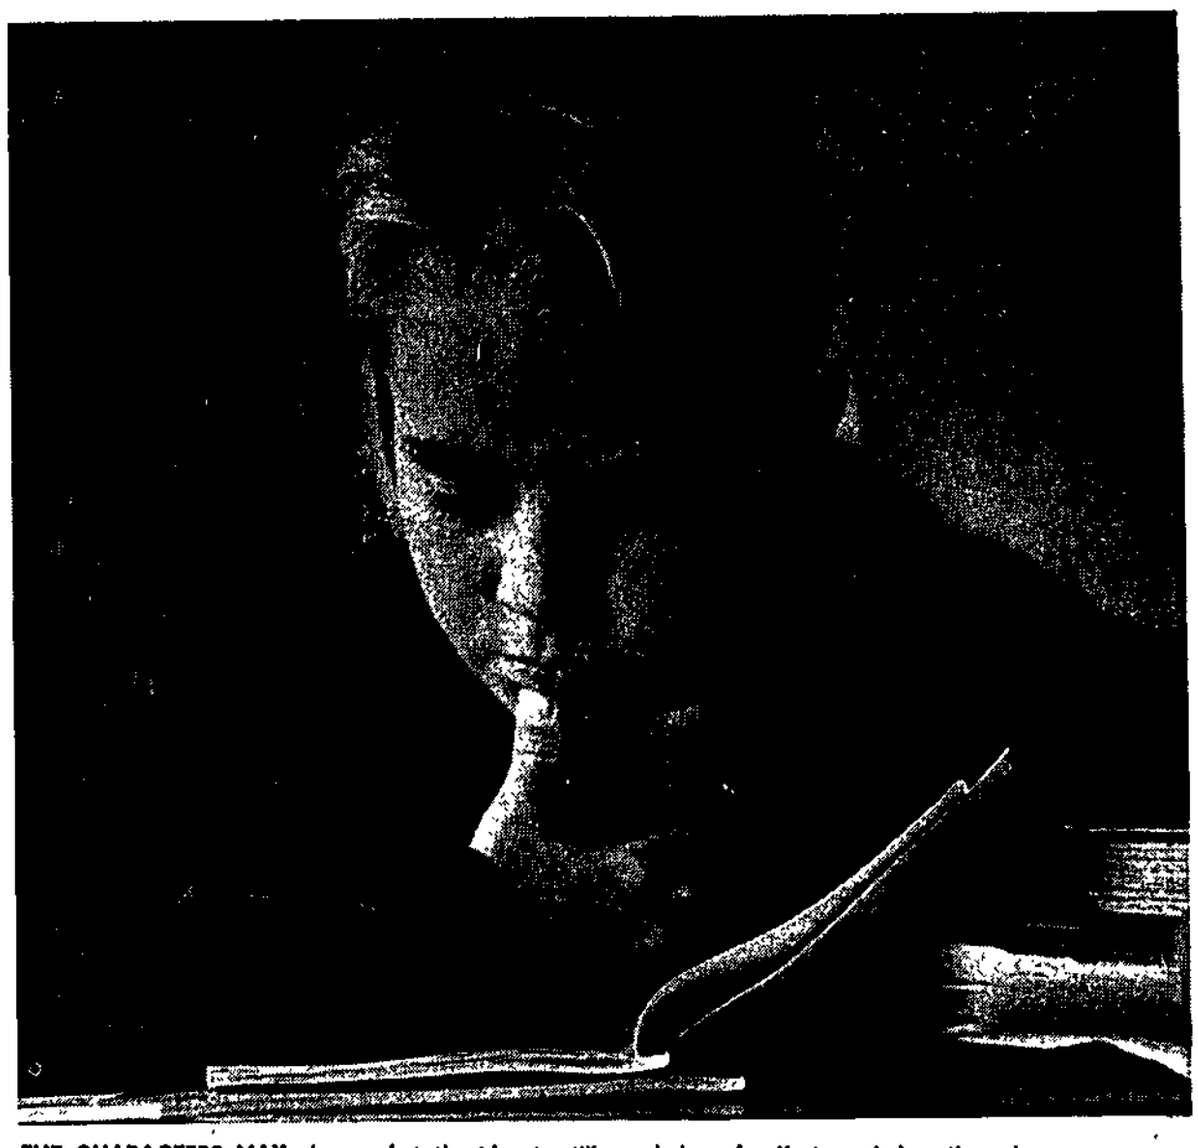
If blacks and Puerto Ricans can influence reading programs to represent them, just think what a determined effort by women's libbers might do.

Instead of trying to cadge a dinner from a tightfisted little old lady, the tramp might be talking a little old man into making "nail" soup — cheaper than using meat.

In these days of high meat prices, that may sound intriguing. The only problem lies in the things you can add to make the soup taste better — meat, flour, carrots . . .

Daddies instead of mommies might be cleaning the house — and can you picture a little old cloud MAN who makes the snow?

In the next reading series the district buys, women may even be shown working — as bus drivers, postwomen, and maybe — reporters.



THE CHARACTERS MAY change, but the idea is still the same. Though Dist. 62 has decided to trade Dick and Jane for Kevin and Jan, the primary purpose — learning to read — hasn't changed an iota.

Summer can be bummer— but city's changing that

by MIKE ZAREMBA

Summer can be the all-time bummer for teen-agers. It's plain and simple. The hot summer days are long and when there's nothing to do — the days get longer and longer and longer.

In the past, the common complaint from the young people was: "the park district provides for outdoor activities and sport competition, but what about some social events."

The city, for the first time, is spending a little money and taking the initiative to give Des Plaines youth an alternative to the usual "hanging around" routine.

DES PLAINES will launch its first youth event July 11. Swimming, dancing, roller skating and possibly a rock band are on the agenda. The free activity will be held at Maine West High School.

Details were ironed out Thursday when the city council youth activity committee met with the city youth coordinator, Ervin Geisler, students from Maine West and the Des Plaines youth commission.

The summer youth program is aimed at teenagers — seventh grade through sophomores in high school.

"We're hoping people will see this as a profitable thing. In the past, Des Plaines hasn't funnelled anything into a youth program. If we can show people this is worthwhile, we'll have more bargaining power in getting facilities," Geisler said.

THE YOUTH program will have four other events this summer. Geisler said he will be working to secure facilities at Lake Opeka for an all-day review. He said there would probably be sailing, golfing, volleyball and the day would end with a dance.

Plans are also in the making for trips to a Cubs game and a state park. The only problem there, Geisler said, would be the insurance liability.

Ald. Carmen Sarlo (6th), chairman of the council's youth committee, said he thinks the city can acquire a group insurance policy at a nominal fee to cover all the teenagers.

Sarlo said he will also look into the possibility of getting tickets for the Cubs game for free or at a discount.

GEISLER SAID in order to make the program work he is going to use all available avenues for publicity — billboards, posters, announcements at the schools in summer session, local FM radio stations, newspapers and "word of mouth."

Geisler said he is enlisting teachers to help with supervision because most of them have "a good rapport with the younger people."

He said the success of "Des Plaines Fun Nite" July 11 will depend on how much "the kids talk it up with one another. When the parents tell them to go do something it isn't as good as finding out for themselves."

City suing Forest Hospital over 'rooming house' usage

The City of Des Plaines has filed suit against Forest Hospital asking for a mandatory court forcing the hospital to stop alleged commercial and rooming house usage of four homes on Rand Road.

The suit was filed Friday in Niles Branch of Cook County Circuit Court. The city will move to dismiss a "short form" complaint today which asks the court to fine the hospital for misuse of the homes.

The suit replaces the short form complaint.

The suit states that four frame residences at 1771, 1796, 1800 and 1840 Rand which are owned by Forest violate zoning ordinances.

The homes, at 1771 and 1840 the suit claims, are occupied by more than three unrelated persons which are allowed by city ordinance. The other two, 1796 and 1800, are being used commercially.

The usage violates city zoning ordinances which prohibit rooming houses or commercial usage in the R-2 single family area.

THE CITY is asking that the court issue a mandatory injunction removing all but three unrelated persons from two and the offices and classrooms of Forest's Postgraduate Center from the others.

All four are used as rooming houses and violate the city's Dwelling Maintenance and Occupancy Ordinance, the suit states. The ordinance sets forth minimum standards for light, ventilation, heating and other facilities in homes.

The suit asks that the court fine the hospital $500 a day for each day of violation since the beginning of the illegal usage in addition to issuing an injunction.

Forest has until July 17 to answer the city's suit. According to a spokesman for the clerk of the circuit court a trial date should be set sometime in mid-August.

A retention basin becomes a lake.

How does 'Natures Way' strike you?

What's in a name? Often apartments

by KAREN BLECHA

The developer turned to the man and asked his opinion of the name for his townhouse development.

The man looked at him, puzzled. "Natures Way?" he asked. "Sounds like a laxative to me."

And Natures Way became Harmony Village.

For each development and subdivision there must be a name that will attract customers. Some developers pick the name themselves, thumbing through books of suggestions. Others are chosen by marketing departments, advertising men or sometimes friends.

"DEVELOPERS TRY to pick the name that best relates to the overall concept of what they are building," said Ed Zalo of Zalo Construction Co. in Arlington Heights.

But while the names may sound good when the development is still on paper, they often don't describe the finished product.

You can't go hunting in Hunting Ridge. There is no ivy at Ivy Hill. Unless he's disguising his accent, you probably won't found one Frenchman at Frenchmen's Cove. You won't find a cove either.

Prince Charles does not live at Prince Charles Garden Apartments in Arlington Heights. The closest thing to an eagle at The Eagles on Tonne Road in Elk Grove Village is a picture of a bird painted on the entrance sign. Your worries won't go away just because you've moved into Carefree of Barrington Square in Hoffman Estates.

WALDEN. A wood and stone development off busy Algonquin Road in Schaumburg, is the last place Henry David Thoreau would have picked for peaceful nature study. And how can a person find seclusion at Hermitage Trace in Hoffman Estates with 416 apartment units already built on 75 acres and 347 more units under construction?

The word "lake" is always popular in names for developments, especially those with retention basins. There is Village on the Lake, Cambridge on the Lake, Versailles on the Lake, Lake Louise Apartments, Three Fountains on the Lake, Lakeside Villas.

To fool you, there's De Lago Villas which translates into "villas on the lake." There is Moon Lake Village where the retention pond is so far behind the apartments that residents probably never see it. And they don't have any patent on the moon.

Near Arlington Heights, you'll find

Peace and contentment?

Runaway Bay (can a bay run away?); in Palatine, Spinnaker Cove and Baybrook Park; and in Schaumburg, Bar Harbor where, coincidentally or not, contractors are building a bar in the recreation center alongside the retention basin.

If you don't like names with water in them, you can have names with a foreign flair. Las Haciendas, Old Madrid, Villa Verde, Georgetown, English Valley, Sheffield Towne, Chelsea Cove, Loch Lomond and best of all, La Casa Blanco Estates. Or names with a royal ring. Kings Walk, Knightsbridge, Kings Arms.

THERE ARE NAMES with Hill or Ridge, when there is no hill, there is no ridge. There are names to prod your imagination, like Sugar Plum or Shalamar. Some names border on the ridiculous. Pity the developer who has to explain how Howle-In-the-Hills, a subdivision once proposed for 155 acres of flatland, got its name.

Some names are tricky. Like VIP Apartments in Wheeling. Most people assume VIP stands for Very Important People when actually the initials mean "very interesting place."

Developers will sometimes go to extremes to get a name that fits. Take Mallard Lake in Wheeling that has a retention basin shaped like a duck. Or Fairway Greens in Wheeling where a nine-hole golf course is under construction.

OTHERS WILL TAKE an easier way out and put up a footbridge or a stone gate at the entrance to justify Stonegate Gardens or Stonebridge Hill.

Some developers, though, have given up the gimmicks and named their developments after streets like Algonquin Park on Algonquin Road, Willow-River Apartments at Willow and River roads and Greenwood Trace on Greenwood Road.

Maybe someday others will follow their example and pass up the pretenses. If developers put their mind to it, they could come up with some simple realistic names. Why not Apartment Acres, Bi-level Trace and Mansions on the Mall? Or how about Plywood Paradise, Bungalow Village, Cardboard Manor or Ticky Tacky Terrace?

Anti-drug 'scare' films don't make it

by PAMELA M. LARRATT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The shades are drawn and the movie projector snaps on in the public school classroom.

The image of a pale science teacher in a venerable white coat projects on the far wall. Some students are bored. The "educational" drama they are about to watch is part of their world outside the classroom.

The "professor" in the movie doesn't have the customary chart and pointer, or vials of smoking chemicals to busy himself. He has a gun, and he points it at his bald temple. He pulls the trigger. There is a click. He puts the gun down and says:

"You have one out of six chances of blowing your brains out with LSD."

THE FILM WAS singled out recently for a showing before newsmen in Washington. A leading advocate of straightforward teaching of the drug problem was highly critical of the approach taken by so-called "educational" films on drug abuse.

Richard M. Earle, chairman of the Washington-based National Coordinating Council on Drug Education (NCCDE) that recently evaluated the more than 200 available wudiovisuals on drug abuse, commented on the nutty professor approach:

"You can imagine the hoots of derision . . . in any classroom of bright curious kids today after that film is shown. It would be far better to show nothing than to unreel one of these efforts."

Of the 200-plus films evaluated in the council's third edition of "Drug Abuse Films," Earle said that some 84 per cent were found to be scientifically and conceptually unacceptable.

HE WARNED THE public, and especially schools, recreation facilities and clubs, against acquiring or renting the films and condemned the producers as conscious "hustlers" of the popular, fear-oriented approach to drug education.

Earle charged that filmmakers several years ago might have had some excuse for shabby research and terror tactics, because then the drug crisis was new and the public hysterical.

"After all," he said, "drug abuse is a multi-layered, exotic subject."

Now it's different. "Any film producer," said Earle, "who today sells or rents a shoddy and ill-conceived film has to be ready to take the accusation of joining the multi-million dollar drug education hustle."

EARLE'S REMARKS were echoed by the council's minority panel member, Henry Jackson, after a clip from a second film was shown the newsmen.

The film, titled "A Day in the Death of Donny B.," shows a young black addict, loping slow-motion through garbage alleys, domestic squalor, rats and roaches, with no hope in sight.

Its perspective was rated negative by the council, a white man's view of connections with heroin in the junkyard of the ghettos.

"Young people need honest answers," said Jackson, "not tawdry stereotypes and cheap sensationalism."

"Donny," was produced by the National Institute of Mental Health, which is a major contributor to the library of available films on drug abuse.

was lucky enough to find his partner with four good hearts so that the final contract was in that suit."

Oswald: "Malcolm opened the king of spades. Who wouldn't? He was allowed to hold the trick and shifted to ace and another heart. South dropped the jack under the ace so as to win the second heart in dummy."

Jim: "I assume that the next play was a low club. That gave you the chance to rise with the ace and lead a third heart, but South would wind up with three hearts, three clubs and two aces."

Oswald: "I could see that happening, so I ducked quickly. South had no problem about what to do next. He finessed the 10-spot. Then he cashed his spade ace and ruffed a spade and came to the same eight tricks with three of his trumps, ace of spades and a spade ruff, two clubs and the ace of diamonds."

DuBrow on TV... by Rick DuBrow

Writer strike may blunt premiere week

HOLLYWOOD—Television's new season will probably get off to a piecemeal start this fall because of the recent four-month writers' strike, but the situation may well work out to the benefit of the public. Here's how:

Normally, the three commercial networks kick off their new seasons in a very brief period — a week or so — with the various premieres going head-to-head with their opposition shows amid lots of publicity hoopla aimed at grabbing viewers. It's an almost impossible situation for viewers, especially those who want to see the first episodes of the new series but find they have to miss the debuts of some freshman entries because of the packed schedule.

This season, however — the way things look now — the annual "premier week" will be something less than complete in terms of offering the fall debuts because of the protracted strike. As of now, all three networks expect a number of the premieres to be offered on a "staggered" basis, as they are ready, over a period of weeks, rather than in one, jam-packed, seven-day blast.

AND, PRESUMING this turns out to be the case, it can only be to the advantage of viewers because they will have more opportunities to see some debuts without missing competing premieres. This will not be the total case when the season begins because the initial fall broadcasts of some programs will still inevitably be matched against each other. But the situation nonetheless will be eased for viewers if the "staggering" plans are carried out.

But while the production delay and potential staggered debuts may benefit television watchers, the after effects of the strike are giving the networks all kinds of headaches. For example, in addition to the basic fact of having to scramble to get their season together, the networks are faced with losing the big impetus they count on from all the premiere week hoopla.

One network spokesman mentions the "residual effect" of the usual hoopla, and that's a big point for the broadcasting organizations. While many series undoubtedly will be starting the season on or near schedule, the lack of the seven-day jolt could result in a public feeling that the new television year is just sort of drifting in.

ALSO, WHEN THE series finally are on the air, it will take longer than usual in the season for a network to determine what are its ratings hits and failures, and to act on its cancellation decisions. As a network spokesman says, "We usually have a pretty good indication on hits and failures by the second week in October. But not this year."

Another spokesman notes that the studios are good at making up time on production, and feels there will be enough new season series on the networks at their originally planned time so that viewers will not think there is any kind of chaos — and he's probably right in both these thoughts. However, one thing comes through more clearly than ever as television rushes to get its new season in shape: "Premier Week," with its usual insane competition, is really for the benefit of the networks, not viewers.

Religion Today...by Lester Kinsolving

Male supremacy had won out–until Mrs. S. came along

PORTLAND, OR.—The usually uproarious annual meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention was, during two of its three days here, so unbelievabley placid that former SBC Pres. Herschel Hobbs announced:

"Someone must have put chloroform in the air conditioning!"

There was, however, no chloroform apparent in the activities of this largest of all U.S. Protestant denominations. For during 1972, the SBC membership passed 12 million and the total income for the first time exceed $1 billion.

Rev. Lester Kinsolving

Moreoever, the denomination has called for 600 volunteers to prepare for the time when Mainland China may allow the return of missionaries. This will add to the 2507 overseas missionaries currently maintained by the SBC in 77 countries (—even as such dwindling denominations as the Methodists, the United Presbyterians and the Episcopalians are substantially reducing their foreign missionary efforts while suggesting that the day of the missionary is over.)

Such dynamic SBC accomplishments, together with the presiding of layman Owen Cooper of Mississippi — one of this decade's most affable and widely admired church leaders — created two days of near-euphoria.

RELIGION NEWS writers, accustomed to the wildly colorful, Scripture-studded brawls that generally highlight this convention, grew absolutely desperate for something newsworthy to report.

Then as if by Divine Intervention, along came Mrs. Sappington.

The honey-blonde wife of the pastor of Cloverleaf Baptist Church in Houston, Mrs. Sappington quite nicely implements Texas' glorious reputation for production pulchritudinous women.

Mrs. Sappington introduced a resolution entitled "The Place of Women In Christian Service."

This resolution was so startling to the convention's resolutions committee that they rewrote (translation: mutilated) it for final submission to the convention.

This procedure was indeed a strategic error.

For as Mrs. Sappington wisely perceived, this giant assemblage of fiercely independent and frequently frisky Baptists fairly bristles at any attempt — by anything resembling central authority — to suppress one of its number. (Particularly attractive Texas blondes.)

HENCE SHE WAS uble to persuade the convention to ignore the committee's emasculated resolution in favor of voting overwhelmingly that (1) most of Women's Lib is an attack upon Scripture — because: (2) Scripture affirms that man is the head of woman — and: (3) woman was created for man — and as such is man's glory.

After adoption of this notable theological position, the convention adjourned for lunch — leaving Mrs. Sappington surrounded by a dozen infuriated seminary students, women and pastors.

The Rev. John Claypool of Fort Worth, for example, seemed to have turned purple from attempting to choke down his rage — as he quietly growled at Mrs. Sappington:

"Scripture also says let the women keep silent in church!"

BUT THIS PASTORAL rebuke left Mrs. Sappington unphazed. For immediately she flashed a great big smile and cooed confidently:

"This isn't in church!"

She was then asked whether she could recall ever having disagreed with any of her husband's sermons.

"I did once," she admitted — which caused her detractors to become especially attentive. "But almost immediately he showed me where I was wrong!"

The Doctor Says...by Dr. Lawrence Lamb

Sour cream aids a sore tongue, reader insists

Dear Dr. Lamb — Sometime ago I read your column on the sore tongue. I used to have this problem and a specialist recommended to me that I take a mouthful of sour cream and hold it in my mouth for some time. Repeat this regularly, even as often as every hour. It worked for me, and I'd like to pass on this recommendation to other people.

Dear Reader — I did write a column about geographic tongue. This problem causes raised spots on the tongue, some soreness, and it may change dramatically overnight. I was surprised to receive a large volume of mail concerning this problem, and most of the letters assured me that this condition could be cured. The various remedies that have been recommended for curing it have included the gamut from holding sour cream in the mouth to various vitamins, mouth washes, throat lozenges and just about as wide a variety of suggestions as the number of letters received. I'm always happy to have reader's suggestions, and sometimes it helps me to understand the confusion people have about medical problems.

The turth is, there is no known treatment for geographic tongue. The problem is, not all sore tongues are geographic tongues. The tongue is a very good indicator of many medical disorders. This is why the doctor asks a patient to stick out the tongue, and takes a good look at it during a medical examination.

You can see evidence of some vitamin deficiencies from the tongue, you can find evidences of anemia, and there are many other important things to observe during the examination of the tongue.

WHETHER OR NOT you can do something about a sore tongue depends on what's causing it. If it's due to a vitamin deficiency, then of course this problem can be corrected.

If it is the changes of the tongue associated with certain anemias, correction of this underlying problem will change the character of the tongue.

The point I would like to make to the large number of you who sent in letters of treatment for geographic tongue is that you're probably all correct in the point that many of these forms of treatment are helpful for certain sore tongues, but not for all sore tongues, which gets me back to my original statement, "not every sore tongue is a geographic tongue."

TO EMPHASIZE the point a little more, not all skin rashes are measles. A skin rash could be chicken pox, scarlet fever, or even secondary syphilis, or such exotic illnesses as Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. The treatment of the skin rash depends on what causes it. The same applies to changes in the tongue. The treatment of the problem of the tongue, including sore tongues, depends on what's causing it.

For those changes in the tongue that are really geographic tongue, I am sorry to say that we really do not have a specific treatment at this time. For those who have changes in their tongue associated with vitamin deficiencies or pernicious anemia, there are suitable treatments for these disorders.

A symptom is a sympton, it is not a diagnosis, and this is why a doctor has to take fairly complete history and an examination to find out what it is that's causing the symptom, then treat this problem and not the symptom itself.

The Lighter Side

Breaking the bureaucrats' secret codes. .

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON—One useful spinoff of the Watergate hearings is an educational benefit. The American people are learning how bureaucrats talk.

Anyone who has been watching the telecasts has become aware, for example, that White House aides never use the words "now" and "then."

White House aides always say "at this point in time" or "at that point in time."

Early in the hearings, a colleague of mine started keeping a tally to see which witness would emerge as the all-time "point in time" champion.

She logged John Caulfield of the White House security staff with 23 time pointings, which may be the record for one-shot testimony.

I SAY "MAY BE" because the results are unofficial. It soon became apparent that the project was too formidable for one person to handle.

By the time such dedicated time pointers as Jeb Magruder and Hugh Sloan were called before the committee, "points in time" were coming at her thicker and faster than she could record them.

My colleague applied to one of the big public-spirited foundations for a grant with which to hire some tabulators. But by then she had fallen so far behind in the count there was no chance of catching up.

Despite the statistical gap, however, there is no doubt that John Dean is presently leading the league in TPTs (Total Points in Time).

DEAN GAINED HIS commanding lead by virtue of spending more time in the witness chair than any of his rivals.

He is credited with two TPTs in his prepared statement, which he read the first day, and with 61 more during his four days of answering questions.

The magnificient career total of 63 TPTs is likely to stand for years to come.

For the benefit of you fanatics who hunger for figures of this sort Dean's daily tabulations were 20, 18, 10 and 13. Truly an amazing performance.

Anyone who has been following the hearings also is now aware that White House aides are very big on "inputs."

THERE WAS A great deal of inputting going on at the White House in connection with the Watergate coverup — at every point in time.

I dare say that if you met Dean on the street and said "hello," he would characterize your greeting as a "cordiality input."

Bear in mind, however, that time pointers and inputters mostly operate in the middle echelons of officialdom.

On the upper level, two of the top "in" words at the moment are "apparatchik" and "dichotomy." Listen for them when the hearings resume.

Chicago hurts noise fight

A well meaning attempt to get some answers to the nagging questions of noise pollution from O'Hare Airport received an obvious snub from the City of Chicago last week and it has become apparent once again that the suburbs can expect nothing from Chicago except abuse.

Representatives of the City failed to show up at hearings held by U.S. Cong. Sam Young, R-10th, into airport noise, despite the fact that Cong. Young was acting in an official capacity and his hearings had the imprimatur of the United States Congress.

Young and his Ad Hoc Committee of the House committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce were looking for some answers about the serious matter of noise pollution. Many agencies responded with testimony, including the much beleagured Federal Aviation Administration. The most powerful political entity and the one which actually controls O'Hare, the City of Chicago, refused to give testimony or send a written statement to the Ad Hoc Committee.

That's about what the suburbs have come to expect from Chicago and it is typical of the frustrating tactics of the city which thinks itself so large it can do what it pleases.

As we have said before, no realistic view of the serious problems of the metropolitan region can be taken without recognizing the worth and impact of Chicago. It is the reason the Northwest suburbs exist, and we in the suburbs and those who live in the city share a common bond in the quality of life available in Northeastern Illinois.

So it is with particular dismay that we view the latest actions of Chicago. Although it is evident that the suburbs of Chicago now nearly match the city in population and vitality, our voice and in fact our demands for cooperation remain unanswered. Cong. Young was doing his job by convening his committee in Park Ridge to seriously consider the effects of noise pollution on communities adjacent to the airport. Young is no enemy of aviation — although being a Republican is apparently the same as being a de facto enemy to the Chicago pols.

All we want from the city of Chicago is the truth. What about airport expansion? What about controls by the city and the FAA on flight paths and flight frequency? What about new runways? What about new flight techniques such as the two-step approach?

Without Chicago's participation in any dialogue about these questions the suburbs are just shouting alone into the jet blast.

Despite latest snubbing by Chicago we urge Cong. Young to continue his efforts. Somehow the City of Chicago must be made to recognize what many suburbanites have recognized all along: we are in this metropolitan region together; there are things such as noise and air pollution which do not recognize the boundaries on a map.

Art or junk?

The thing about modern art, or most of the stuff that is passed off as art, is that there is simply no way to judge it.

Take the minor tragedy that befell sculptor John Chamberlain in Chicago the other day. Chamberlain is an "abstract expressionist" who fashioned two 300-pound, six-foot-high sculptures out of junk metal — twisted automobile bumpers, crumpled washing machines and the like — all welded together in an abstractly expressionistic manner, or expressionistically abstract manner.

Chamberlain valued the sculptures at a total of $20,000 — and who is to gainsay him?

At any rate, it seems that one Walter Kelly, owner of an art gallery, made the mistake of taking the sculptures outside his warehouse to clean them up for a prospective buyer.

"I had them covered with canvas but the wind blew it off," said Kelly. "Buildings are being renovated in the neighborhood and a lot of junkmen are around hauling things away."

Junkmen. Junk sculpture. You've guessed the ending. Even the offer of a $1,000 reward failed to turn up the missing works of art.

The moral: Either, (a) it's too bad we don't have more esthetically sensitive junkmen in this country or, (b) sculpture ought to bear characteristics which even to the untutored eye set it apart from the general run of inventory one finds in a typical junkyard.

Which suggests one test of modern art. If a collision between an automobile and a brick wall produces a result indistinguishable from some of the things enshrined in our museums, then either, (a) auto crashes are a great art form or, (b) junk sculpture is junk.

Chimpanzees have been known to throw paint around and come up with abstract canvases that alleged experts could not tell were not made by human hands. So far, however, no chimp has duplicated anything like Leonardo's Mona Lisa.

Retired police total hit

Your June 1 Herald editorial in reference to State Sen. Jack Walker of Senate Bill 486 which would permit retired police officers to continue to carry the tools of their profession for which they have been trained to use, is another example of a mis or uninformed editor.

This type of editorial certainly reflects the newspaper which once was known by many residents as "the weekly wipe." Due to competition (The Day), Paddock Publications went to a bi-weekly and finally a daily, then purchased the other newspaper and continued to take "pop shots" with half truth editorials.

Your article estimates there are 25,000 retired police officers in Illinois which in reality is about 3,000. Less than 2,500 retired officers now reside in this state. As Senate Bill 486 is optional, many of the retired law enforcement officers would not elect to carry the concealed weapon anyway.

You question the judgment of a doctor whether they would be capable of determining if a person is physically and mentally healthy enough to carry a weapon. This type of examination is required before an applicant is accepted into police work and certainly their judgment should be accepted now.

The law is very specific as to when a weapon may be used and on who the responsibility rests. Law enforcement officers have gone to jail for improper use of a weapon and it would hold true with retired officers. Morally and legally.

Many watchmen, private investigators, guards and security personnel are permitted to carry concealed weapons even though many of them have not been properly trained and their ages are not exactly youngsters. Yet your editorial contends a man who has had at least 20 years of training should not be permitted to make himself available when an emergency arises. The citizens would definitely be getting additional protection without cost to the city.

The asinine remarks about jay-walkers and purse snatchers being shot by three 60-80 year old men on a street corner as well as the cartoon with falling machine gun and other weapons which reflects your editorial and doesn't merit even mentioning.

As president of the Illinois Police Association, I'm unable to understand the benefit our association will receive from Senate Bill 486 as stated in the editorial. If you have any knowledge at all of this bill, you will find the sponsor of the bill was the Retired Police Officers of Chicago and not proposed by our lobbyist. I might add that these officers are citizens.

The Illinois Police Association has over 21,000 full time law enforcement officers as members being the largest police association in Illinois and the second largest state association in the United States. We were the first police association to go on record to support mandatory training for all law enforcement officers in Illinois.

As a constructive suggestion for the future, why not put the name of the writer of the editorials by the column so the citizens will know who is responsible for the mis-stated facts. If you are looking for true facts, ask the person you are writing about.

Irvin L. McDougall,
President
Illinois Police Association, Inc.

EDITOR'S NOTE: There are more than 3,100 retired policemen in the City of Chicago alone. No source — not even the Illinois Police Association — has accurate figures on the total retired officers from every police agency in the state. State Sen. Donald Swinarski, D-Chicago, who led the floor fight against the bill has estimated there are 25,000 retired Illinois policemen.

The exact number, however, is only of secondary importance to the principle. Be there 25,000 or 2,500, The Herald feels fewer people should be walking around carrying guns, not more.

Fireworks control needed

I applaud Tuesday's top-of-the-front-page article on the illegality of fireworks in the state but you have given up too easily on the goal of making the holiday safe. "No matter what regulations become law, it is doubtful the Fourth ever will be celebrated with a whimper instead of a bang" — ESPECIALLY if the laws are not enforced. The village police department told me that one-third of the force was out answering calls on fireworks in addition to their "regular" duties, but our police officers can't be expected to consider fireworks abuse a serious problem if the general public openly flaunts the ruling.

If the village is serious about protecting youngsters and adults alike from these dangerous explosives, which are so easily misused, can't they send half the police force out to actively search out violations? If a patrolling officer hears an explosion nearby, stops and can fix the location by hearing a second explosion, is that not evidence enough to enter the back yard and make an arrest if more fireworks are found? Can't there be a publicized campaign against fireworks abuse, more gruesome photographs on front pages of the terribly maimed children and adults, more encouragement for people to call in complaints and maximum fines for adults who supply kids with fireworks or whose children are caught with them?

I am not trying to spoil anyone's fun — there is an approved and safe fireworks display in every village, free of charge. Unfortunately, it seems that parents do not realize they are teaching their children disrespect for the law when they buy or allow their children to have illegal fireworks. Fireworks are proven to be dangerous — perhaps Northwest Community Hospital can provide some closer-to-home statistics. There is a good reason why they are illegal, and any parent or child who thinks "it won't happen to me" is risking his own sight and limbs everytime he lights a fuse, as well as making it difficult for healthily fearful neighbors to enjoy the holiday.

Evelyn F. Wagner

Letters welcome

The Herald welcomes and encourages letters from readers. Letters are published in "The Fence Post" column; no anonymous mail is considered for publication, and we will not withhold names on request. Keep recycling!

I agree with the person who wrote in criticizing the village fathers for lack of interest in the recycling of cans and glass. It is true that other towns are doing the same thing by setting curtailed dates and time for disposing of said articles, thus making it very inconvenient for the public to bring the products to recycling centers. I have been saving cans and bottles for as long as recycling has been in force and always washed cans and bottles, flattened cans and separated all articles as requested. I also know that many people ignored all rules and dumped everything in bins, willy-nilly. However, the main fault lies with Ball Glass Works or others who couldn't care less about ecology. True, labor costs run high but corporations never absorb that cost, they just pass it on to the public in higher prices.

Another subject I wish to comment on is "Secretariat Day." It put Arlington Heights on the map, thanks to Mr. Loome and his management. It brought in money to businesses and publicity, so why was not courtesy shown to the many visitors who came in from all over the country? The police department could have declared a moratorium on side street parking or quietly ignored it on this one big day. We saw tickets on cars all over. What nice publicity and courtesy shown our visitors! It resulted in a bad name for Arlington Heights, and "never come again" comments. How greedy can you get?

But then it should be no surprise after what happened at a certain graduation day at one of our schools some time ago when cars could not get into the parking lot and parked on the street and were ticketed!

'Old-fashioned' summer sports

In this, the summer of Watergate, it's good to know that there are elements here and there of what old-fashioned, uncomplicated summers used to be like.

Part of the way summer used to be is alive and prospering on South Waverly Street in Mount Prospect. At least it was alive until last weekend, when the Rader kids left for summer vacation with the bat and softball.

Until then, you could have counted on a softball game starting after 7 p.m. in the middle of that tree-shaded suburban street.

Unless it was raining, the first kid would speed up on his bike to the baseball diamond by shortly after 7. Like flies drawn to carrion, the kids would quickly gather for the first inning.

The diamond's painted right on the street pavement — and first and third base are painted up against the curb, while second's further down the street, and when a resident drives through and interrupts a game, he waves and the kids shout back.

Girls and boys play softball together on South Waverly Street. Often the teams are imbalanced, so the rules are altered to the size of the teams. Ground rules are invented, depending on the number of parked cars.

But it's a game for all the neighborhood, not just the kids. Your columnist joins in as a catcher, and the pitcher's a furniture salesman with the pitching style of a slightly deranged Dizzy Dean. Other neighbors, as the shadows lengthen, join in as umpires or as outfielders, protecting the parked cars up the street.

The game ends in darkness, rain or as the mosquito spraying truck makes its second pass down South Waverly Street. No one's kept a score card, but everyone knows the final score. The kids trudge home while the adults gather under a tree, gossip and drink beer.

It would be stickball if played in Brooklyn and it is what existed before the invention of Little League baseball. There are no uniforms, no coaches, no leagues, no box scores and no rabid parents screaming from weather-beaten bleachers. There's only a verbal legend about the kids who have played this game, have grown up and are now far away.

For the neighborhood it was nothing more than a bunch of kids who get together on hot summer nights with a bat and a 16-inch baseball, supplemented by a couple of men trying to sweat off a little weight, have some exercise and pretend, like the kids, that this is the big time. And it all occurs while the sun is setting behind the trees on the south side of Mount Prospect in this, the Year of Watergate.

Don't look for the game, however, if you drive down Waverly Street some evening. Such sports events are ad hoc and unpredictable and, after all, you just might get hit by a flying football.

Edward Hanrahan and Stanley Kusper can relax a little this week, for one of their prime critics has left the staff of the Herald.

As announced last Friday, Roger Capettini, the Herald's Metropolitan Editor, has taken a job as a reporter for the Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., News.

Roger's County Line columns always evoked reactions — often, the reaction was violent disapproval. He's a precise and staunchly aggressive reporter, and a dogged defender of the little guy who gets ripped off by government or by other people.

Good luck, Rog — it's been a pleasure.

Business Today

by J. PAUL WYATT

PANAMA CITY — The International Executive Service Corps invests old-fashioned Yankee ingenuity and modern managerial know-how instead of dollars in the future of developing countries.

This no-strings-attached aid appears to be paying of with returns money can't buy.

"If I were to choose the best vehicle the United States has for relations with the rest of the world I would choose the IESC," said Guillermo Tribaldos III, assistant general manager of a Panama liquor concern which has benefited from nine IESC projects.

"From what we can observe we're sure the IESC project will work out with complete success," remarked Francisco Wong Chang, owner of a chain of Panama discount stores and another IESC beneficiary.

LAST YEAR U.S. executive volunteers, mostly retirees from general management, production, personnel, marketing and finance fields, took part in more than 600 projects in 52 countries.

Most foreign firms that received IESC assistance enjoyed increased production, efficiency, sales and profits.

"We assist only those industries we feel will be helpful in a country's development," said J. Leonard Leland, director of IESC operations in Panama and Costa Rica.

COMPANIES REQUESTING IESC help must have at least 51 per cent local ownership, a growth potential, and management that can profit from IESC assistance and, if possible, be willing to make a token contribution to the cost of the program. In Panama, firms are asked to contribute $1,000 a year.

Leland said, "The firm requesting assistance fills out an application which is used for recruiting the executive in New York. Biographical data on a volunteer is sent to the field office from New York and the field office then decides whether this is the right man for the job."

The foreign firm pays the executive's plane fare and a per diem in accord with the prevailing cost of living in the country. The executive's tour averages about three months.

THE IESC IS based on an idea put forward by David Rockefeller, of the Chase Manhattan Bank, at the International Management Congress in 1963. Its first overseas project was launched in Panama in 1965. Among Panama's quota of 35 projects this year are the following:

- Willard H. Hauser, formerly chief engineer of WBZ-TV, Boston, examined the installations of Televisora Nacional, S.A., of Panama City, and made technical recommenations for the station's planned production of live color programs.
- Dr. George I. DeBecze, former manager of research and distillery control for Schenley Distillers, Inc., helped Guillermo Tribaldos Jr. y Cia to double processing capabilities of its fermentation station, increase yield and reduce the consumption of steam, energy and water per unit of its product. He also showed the client how to produce its own neutral spirit pure alcohol instead of buying it.
- Herbert W. Whitaker, former assistant to the president of the Concorde Yacht Division of the Brunswick Corp., showed Astilleros de Chiriqui, S.A., a small boat-building firm, how to construct the molds for 62-foot fiberglass shrimp boats. Three months later Astilleros turned out its first batch of 60 big boats.

Aluminum production, profits boom

Profits in the aluminum industry in the coming months should show still further improvement over the estimated 40 per cent year-to-year gain in the first quarter, say economists at Chicago's Northern Trust Bank.

The recovery in the industry has now progressed into a "full-blown boom" observes the bank's economic newsletter, "Business Comment."

The sharp expansion in the U.S. economy has been largely responsible, but a shift in international market forces — in part reflecting the devaluation of the dollar — has also aided domestic producers.

With output up 14 per cent in the first four months of 1973, the industry appears to be using most of its available basic production facilities, notes Northern Trust. Companies are producing at well above a 90 per cent rate of capacity, and prices have firmed significantly in recent months. Major U.S. producers have eliminated price discounts which persisted in 1972.

Labor official accuses Teamsters Local 705

Union tactics 'racketeering'

A ruling last week by a National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) official, labeling the tactics of Chicago-based Teamsters Local 705 as "sheer racketeering," opens the door for some $60 million to $90 million in suits for repayment of money collected from area service station owners.

Stanley Ohlbaum, administrative law judge for the NLRB, in Washington, handed down the ruling Wednesday. He said an investigation of Local 705, which represents local cartage and local drivers in the Chicago area, disclosed a 15-year history of illegal tactics in enrolling gasoline station attendants and illegally pressuring employers for contributions.

Ohlbaum said the union's actions were "flagrant and corrupting," also referring to their actions as "sheer racketeering." He is turning evidence in the case to the Justice Department for review.

ORDERING THE UNION to repay thousands of workers for initiation and other fees which were illegally collected, Ohlbaum said this could total $90 million. The period for which the repayment is to be made covers six months before and after the filing of charges in November, 1970, by the Gasoline Retailers Association of Metropolitan Chicago.

Louis Peick, head of Local 705, is a key Teamsters official. He is one of three trustees of the Teamsters international union. The union attorneys agreed to appeal the decision to the full NLRB board, contending that Ohlbaum's findings are not correct.

Gene Albano, executive director of the Gasoline Retailer Association of Metropolitan Chicago, said the NLRB decision should mean an end to pressuring of attendants and service station owners for contributions to Local 705. The dealers had been paying dues and health and welfare benefits for their employes, when threatened with the cutoff of gasoline deliveries, he said.

ALBANO SAID THE biggest chunk of payments from the union will come in civil suits, expected to total $60 to $90 million. "We never got the actual number of attendants affected," he said, "but we're assuming it is maybe 5,000 to 6,000." The industry has a 35 to 40 per cent annual turnover. The only way to track and locate all the employes affected will be through union records, Albano said Thursday.

"The whole thing started when the union refused to negotiate a contract," Albano added. The requirement that weekly contributions had to be made to the union coffers increased the cost of operation for many dealers, he said.

The NLRB ruling also charged that Local 705 did not try to represent its membership among gasoline station attendants, once they were recruited.

More than 20 instances of specific wrongdoing by the union were listed in Ohlbaum's statement. He said the improper practices usually meant a confrontation with a new service station owner in the Chicago area. The owner would be shown a collective agreement to represent the station employes. Threats of picketing and a cutoff of gasoline supply deliveries were made, if the owner didn't sign the contract.

Managing your family's money

Good investing begins with wise saving

by MERLE E. DOWD

Would-be investors sometimes go about their business backwards. They may cite a shopper's list of reasons: Building a retirement. Setting aside money to grow into a college fund. Building a security backlog of funds. You can probably add your own reasons for investing.

Planning future financial moves on the stock market, in real estate, or your own business can be fascinating. Advice to help you dream pours out of magazines, newspapers and several thousand books. A typical Chronicle begins, "$10,000 if invested in XYZ would grow to—" and ends with some enticing figure dangled to attract your eye.

QUESTION — Where does the $10,000 come from to invest?

Unless the proverbial rich uncle dies and leaves it to you, the $10,000 doesn't drop from the sky ready to start growing.

Cash for investment are those dollars remaining out of the bundle of bucks you bring home from the office or plant. The nut you squirrel away for seed accumulates from the dollars you manage to hang onto after spending for food, housing, clothing and all the rest. Or, look at your spending like a business and develop your own annual income statement.

Begin with your total income earned for 1972. You can find that information on your W-2 form plus any interest, rent, royalties, or other income earned. Or, if you are figuring your income tax for 1972, use your gross income reported as your starting point.

You can take away the big expenditures quickly — Social Security and income taxes withheld, mortgage or rent payments, car payments, and other installment debts, medical bills, and on into the smaller nitty-gritty.

WITH COMPLETE records you could account for all your income. Without records look for increases or decreases over the year in savings, U.S. Savings Bonds purchased, stocks owned, or the net value of real estate acquired. For an income statement, consider only the change in these holdings for the year.

If you spent more than you earned, the difference will show up as bills remaining unpaid or savings reduced.

If you spent less than you earned, consider the remaining dollars as your profit, or retained earnings from your family "business." these are your capital dollars — your nest egg for investment.

A family loaded with short-term debt shouldn't be thinking seriously about investing. That family can earn more by getting out of debt.

INTEREST ON consumer purchases runs about 12 per cent for sure, perhaps as much as 36 per cent on small loans. Compare those costs to the return on insured savings or government-back bonds at 5 to 5½ per cent.

Therefore, the family with a load of consumer debt can earn 12 per cent or more with no risk by eliminating short-term debt and avoiding the finance charges — double the sure earnings of a savings account.

With few debts you can risk investments tthat offer the possibility of 12 to 15 per cent returns because of your sound financial position. A layoff, strike, or accident won't force you to liquidate a promising investment early or during a period when values are depressed because you need cash. An ill-timed liquidation could wipe out years of growth.

If you aim to join the investors for real and not in fantasy —

- Clear up short-term debts by reducing current spending and applying the leftover dollars to the debts.
- Set aside bottom line earnings from reduced spending and retain them in your capital account for investing.

Jack Stockton introduces foreground music!

Most FM radio stations play background music. The kind that's played in elevators, offices and factories. The kind you can, and often do, turn off without even touching the dial. On WM, Jack Stockton plays foreground music. The kind of music that makes you want to hum or sing-along. Your kind of music. And he talks to you as if you are a human instead of a robot even if you're in an elevator, office or a factory. After all, isn't that why you turned on the radio in the first place?

9 equal rights bills reach Governor's desk

Nine of 10 women's rights bills introduced into the Illinois legislature were passed and sent to the Governor's desk before the overtime session ended last Monday.

Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights a co-sponsor of the bills, predicted that Governor Walker will sign them into law.

Mrs. Chapman said the bills implement the equal rights clause of the state constitution. But, she cautioned, this will not reduce the need for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

"ERA concerns your relationship to the U.S. Constitution and to the governments of other states that do not have equal rights clauses in their constitutions," she said.

She added that the equal rights provisions of the Illinois state constitution "haven't destroyed the family," an argument that has been used by opponents of the ERA.

The 10 bills, which were sponsored by all eight women in the House, including Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, were the result of research that turned up inequities in the Illinois statutes with regard to the rights of women.

INCLUDED among the bills were measures to change the reference in the Wrongful Death Act from "widow" to "surviving spouse;" to substitute the word "person" in each instance where the term "woman" is used; to prohibit discrimination in employment under state and federal defense contracts; and to prohibit discrimination in employment under the University Civil Service System.

The only bill that did not pass would have repealed the law restricting women to an 8-hour work day. According to Mrs. Chapman, the bill was defeated because "there were differing views on how to provide for equal treatment."

She said organized labor favored voluntary overtime with time-and-a-half pay to be extended to all workers, male and female.

In related developments, Mrs. Chapman won passage of a House resolution establishing a committee to study state employment of women and minority groups.

SHE SAID THE nine-member committee will study employment patterns in all branches of state government. It will look at the age, sex, rank, compensation, length of employment and promotion of women and minority groups "as contrasted with other employees," Mrs. Chapman said.

"There appears to be some evidence that women and minority groups are discriminated against by the state in the area of employment," she said, adding that the state is the biggest employer in Illinois.

The committee is required to report on its findings by Dec. 1, 1974, and to propose legislative solutions.

Mrs. Chapman also reported at the close of the session last week that "things are moving now" with a lawsuit filed in May by ERA proponents. The suit challenges the requirements of the Illinois Constitution for ratification of federal constitutional amendments.

THE SUIT contends that the 95-72 vote on the ERA in the House last April "was sufficient for passage."

Mrs. Chapman said last week that no state in the union has a constitutional provision for an extraordinary majority such as the three-fifths majority required by the Illinois Constitution for ratification of federal constitutional amendments.

A place to remember

Newlyweds still honeymoon

by KAREN THOMPSON

That old conventional marriage ceremony follow-up — the honeymoon — is on the upswing and today's is longer, better and more expensive than ever.

Despite the uproar in the nation about promiscuity, the carefree lifestyle of the youth and the fear of the older generation that the institution of marriage is of a bygone era, there were more than two million weddings in the United States last year.

The standard wedding march may be replaced by the Carpenters' song "We've Only Just Begun," the bride may wear a floral print instead of pure white, and the ceremony may take place in a forest preserve rather than a church, but a higher percentage of our total population is married now than ever before.

One set of statistics reports that at least 80 per cent of the couples planning to marry still set time aside for the honeymoon.

"THE ONLY difference we've noticed is that a honeymoon couple doesn't seek the seclusion that twosomes of 10 or 20 years ago sought," said Robert Ugolini, director of the famous honeymoon centers in Pennsylvania's Poconos. "Though newlyweds do like some privacy, they are equally eager to socialize with other brides and grooms," he said.

The pampering paraphernalia of the Poconos' resorts, known as the "honeymoon capital of the world," has played host to more than one million couples in the past 25 years.

Resorts offer such luxuries as Roman style sunken bathtubs and carpeted walls and ceilings. One even provides a private glass-encased indoor swimming pool adjoining each bedroom.

The whole notion of especially designed resorts to please newlyweds started back in the '40s when a hospitable Penn Dutchman opened his farm gates to just-married couples who, he felt, needed a happy, sympathetic place to relax, enjoy and get to know each other. Today's backgrounds may be more elaborate and couples may be more sophisticated, but the heart of the matter is the same.

WHETHER THEY seek nightlife, beaches, or enjoy a lovestyle of alone-togetherness, honeymooners need a place to remember.

For those looking for something closer to home, the Regency Hyatt House will put into effect, in August, a honeymoon package with all the trimmings. The couple will be greeted in their double room with a fifth of champagne, a basket of fruit, cheese and crackers and long-stemmed glasses to take home. The traditional breakfast in bed the next morning includes full meal with caviar, personalized match books and a special gift, a floral arrangement enclosed in glass, from the hotel for the honeymooners' first home.

The Sheraton O'Hare boasts two rooms with sunken water beds and a split of champagne to start off the honeymoon.

The "first nighter" at the O'Hare International Hotel includes a bottle of champagne and is sometimes called the "mecca of taking off" because honeymooners are usually on a layover waiting for flights out of O'Hare to places unknown the following day.

AND IF THAT'S not enough opulence to lure you to the altar, some resorts have dotted their properties with various reminders of the love theme. While strolling, you're apt to discover a "kissing bridge," a road sign reading "Drive Slowly, Dears Crossing," even a cupid or two with poised bow and arrow. Would you believe?

Honeymoon destinations chosen by couples in the Northwest suburban area are as varied as there are places to go. Personal circumstances such as finances, employment, military service and school often dictate honeymoon plans for area twosomes.

For the more adventurous and thrifty, camping trips render the privacy that only mother nature could provide. A local couple recently went one step further on a month-long bicycle trip through the new England states. Northern Wisconsin and the southeast part of the United States are the most popular spots for campers.

HONEYMOONS ARE not always considered necessary to couples today. To some, buying a new home is more important than an investment in a vacation. For others, tragedy sets in as in the case of a couple who had planned a honeymoon but at the last minute had to cancel because the bride became ill with the flu and mononucleosis.

While some couples honeymoon their way back to college, others may spend a year or more in such places as Frankfurt, Germany while the groom finishes a tour of duty with the armed services.

Other popular honeymoon spots are the traditional love nooks like Hawaii, Florida, the Bahamas, Jamaica, and that long-time favorite, Niagara Falls. Closer to home partialities seem to be the Playboy Club and the Abbey in Wisconsin and the Grand Hotel on romantic, autoless Mackinac Island.

It's all in the name of that quaint pastime, "tying the knot." Marriage is here to stay.

ALONE TOGETHER, newlyweds at Pennsylvania's Poconos, the "love capital of the world," spend time on Cupid's Bridge making plans for their future as husband and wife.

Freshman coed is top ROTC cadet

by RUTH YOUNGBLOOD

HONOLULU — A coed who swings from a rope into a reservoir 40 feet below, marches for hours on a drill field and hits the targets on a rifle range is the top Army ROTC cadet at the University of Hawaii.

Pfc. Alison L. Melemai was "looking for a challenge" and found it in ROTC.

The 19-year-old freshman, among the first group of women ever to enroll in a university ROTC program, was named the top cadet over her male and female colleagues.

"I have this thing about personal challenges," Miss Melemai said. "I wanted to see what I could do."

The University of Hawaii was one of 10 schools in the United States which opened Army ROTC ranks to women as a pilot program last fall. The program, part of the Army's plan to achieve all-volunteer status, is aimed at making Army life more attractive to women by enlarging the opportunities available to them.

MISS MELEMAI, among the handful of eager young women to sign up at the University of Hawaii, was selected the top cadet on the basis of over-all excellence and attitude.

Attending training camps at Schofield Barracks, Miss Melemai dropped from a rope suspended 40 feet high into a reservoir, swam ashore and came out smiling. Her fatigues were dripping.

She has spent hours winding through rough terrain, marching up and down on drill fields and practicing on the rifle ranges. Miss Melemai has received instruction in leadership, psychology, management, map reading and small unit tactics.

"I didn't join ROTC to see how much I could get out of it," she said. "I want to see how much I can do."

"It teaches you about people, management and leadership," Miss Melemai said. "The training can benefit you wherever you go."

MISS MELEMAI was selected the top Army ROTC cadet over 70 men and a dozen other women. The award brings her a four-year scholarship that covers expenses for books, supplies and tuition, plus a $100 monthly stipend.

In addition to her ROTC activities, Miss Melemai had the highest possible grade point average for her first semester at the university.

A dark haired young woman of Hawaiian, French and Japanese ancestry, Miss Melemai does not consider being the top cadet a disadvantage with the male cadets, who far outnumber the women in the program here.

"At first the guys felt a little funny around girl cadets," she said. "But now they're used to us and ask us out on dates.

"When I won the award, everyone congratulated me, males and females."

"WHEN YOU'RE feminine, you're always feminine," she said. "It doesn't matter if the guys see you with a rifle or covered with mud."

Miss Melemai's enrollment in the ROTC program grew out of family interest. Her father, a long time Army reservist and booster of ROTC, was delighted when one of his four daughters signed up.

Miss Melemai must serve four years of active duty in the regular Army following her graduation and is confident the military is a career a girl can go far in.

"Just try to excel for yourself," she advises. "If you don't learn anything in ROTC, it's your own fault."

Wheeler-dealer in trivia

All my life I have been a collector of useless facts. When I was in school this was a hindrance. Then I found it impossible to remember the dates of any major wars or treaties because my mind was cluttered with movie stars' birthdates and the specific gravities of an assortment of breakfast cereals.

However, as I reached adulthood and trivia became the game in vogue, my being a useless fact collector turned out to have some value. I learned at that time, if one didn't have the precise knowledge at hand, one could often fake it with a related useless fact.

For example, the fact that the per capita paper consumption in the United States is 40 tons sounds as though it would be retained by someone knowledgeable about the paper industry. Maybe so, but I can't get it out of my mind. I can create an aura of knowing all about it with my lone fact about whales, too. Sometimes their backs get sunburned and peel.

NOW USUALLY when I find an interesting useless fact, I store it until I find the relevant time and impressionable company in which to bring it up. But I just found one that is too good to keep.

This information concerns a method of catching the kind of fish one prefers. Now I am interested in fishing only without bait. That way I don't have to worry about being disturbed from a nap by a fish on the line. However, this method so intrigued me that I had to put it in my fact file — even though, for me, it would be useless.

According to the experts, one must first catch one fish. As soon as it is pulled out of the water, take it off the hook and insert a thermometer in its mouth, using an instrument that shows temperatures between 50 degrees and 100 degrees. Then tie the thermometer to the fishing line near the weight — after removing it from the fish and noting the reading, of course. If the fish you first caught is desirable, secure the bait at the depth that is the same as the fish's temperature. If you wish to try for another breed of fish, adjust the weight to carry the bait to another depth, i.e., temperature level.

THE IDEA BEHIND this is that different kinds of fish seek different water levels depending on the water temperature. Generally the temperature of the fish is the same as the temperature of the water it swims in.

I'm sure this information has value for someone, but as I have stated, it has absolutely none for me. But I'm sure I will never forget it. I am also sure that it is now occupying the space in my personal memory bank that once was reserved for reminding me where I left my grocery list.

Fashion
by Genie

If you've by chance seen the first shipments of clothing apparel for fall and think the items look more expensive . . . you are absolutely right. They are.

Eleanor Lambert, founder of the Best Dressed List and head of American Designer Showings, predicts clothing bills for women will be up 12 to 20 per cent this fall.

President Nixon's price freeze didn't help at all. The prices were set before the freeze even went into effect. So, check that happy impulsive buying. It just might turn you into a pauper come September.

Actually higher prices on anything made of wool were forecast a year ago. Wool has gone up because it happened to get itself into a short supply situation.

IN MOST RECENT seasons manufacturers have chosen manmade fabrics which ultimately caused the wool market slump. To put it simply, many of the sheep raised for their wool were no longer needed and thus were slaughtered for the table. And until the flocks are again built up, the wool shortage will continue along with a higher price most people don't like to pay.

Other fine fabrics are becoming scarce too. Pure cashmere, chiffon, angora, wool gabardine, tweeds, real suede, crepe de chine and thin lame are "not only precious today but tomorrow's collector's items," continued Miss Lambert.

There are certain ways to beat clothing inflation. Fashion isn't all bad. Negligees and loungewear once worn only within the house and before that, behind closed doors of the bedroom, are now big news as formal evening wear.

THIS HAS SOMETHING to do with the new freedom of dress . . . and also price increases.

The wearing of negligees outside the home is easy on the budget and currently socially acceptable. But be selective. Some gowns still have bedroom written all over them.

How do women's pants stand today? Very solid. While no longer a high fashion item, neither are pants the least bit passe . . . even if the emphasis is now on the dress.

Fall collections almost all include pants for both daytime and evening wear. About the surest thing you can say about pants is that they have become a definite wardrobe staple and will no doubt always be around for those women who prefer wearing them.

The biggest problem with pants right now is keeping their look updated. Oscar de la Renta and Bill Blass, two prominent fashion designers, are showing pant suits with bulky jackets made even bulkier with long hair fur trims.

IN MOST COUTURE collections for fall, pants are slim and straight as compared with the exaggerated, wide leg of recent seasons. Some of the new ones are unpleated to give a rounded tubular effect.

Then there will be those with a stitched front crease, pants with cuffs and a few walking shorts.

But don't let that straight leg scare you. It will be quite awhile yet before ready-to-wear feels the impact. They have to be tried out first. And remember what happened to the midi. It didn't get very far past the couture stage at all.

No one wants to put gold and silver down. But then not everyone can afford them either. If the prices of gold today intimidate you, as well they should, check into coal. Yes, I said coal.

Coal jewelry was recently introduced at a showing in New York. It can do a few things gold and silver can. That is . . . be fashioned into earrings, bracelets and pendants.

NO, IT WON'T blacken your wrists or necks or even dirty your clothes. The polished and cut coal is coated with a clear plastic sealant.

One jewelry designer describes coal as "combustible chic." And who knows, with an energy crisis in focus, coal might just become a real fad item.

Bracelet and earrings will probably be priced around $7.50 and coal pendants will run around $12.50. And that is lots cheaper than gold.

But if you think coal jewelry is somewhat unusual, then you haven't heard of the new fad that Hanes Hosiery launched without even realizing it. It will appeal to doctors who have all the while been warning us about the ill effects of the sun.

Brightly colored legs in some sections of the country (I haven't seen anyone try it here yet) are the newest fashion companion for swimsuits.

STRUGGLING FOR that summer tan on the legs appears to be on the way out with some young fashionables who have picked up on the all-sheer panty hose, originally intended to be paired with short skirts and walking shorts, and matching them with their new bikinis.

Personally, I'll stick to sun tan lotion and no hose at all.

June graduates married

With their university graduation and marriage both taking place in early June, the summer had an exciting beginning for Jodi Ann Knudson of Elk Grove Village and Ken Sticken of Glenview.

Graduating from Northern Illinois University and then married on June 9, the couple is continuing to live in DeKalb where both are employed. Jodi is a swimming instructor for the DeKalb YMCA, and her husband is with the University National Bank.

She earned her degree in education of the blind and Ken's is in business. Jodi is also a '69 alumna of Elk Grove High School.

THEY EXCHANGED vows and rings in an 11 a.m. ceremony in Queen of the Rosary Catholic Church, Elk Grove Village. Later a reception at Camelot Restaurant, Des Plaines, featured dinner and dancing for 175 guests.

Jodi is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Knudson, 66 Brantwood, Elk Grove. Ken's parents are te Edward Stickens of Glenview.

As she was given in marriage, Jodi wore an ivory chiffon gown trimmed with Venise lace and accordion pleating on the high neck, the cuffs of the long sleeves and the flounce along the floor-length hem. An ivory Juliet cap with a short veil completed her attire.

She carried Abbey roses, daisies, straw flowers and baby's breath in a nosegay arrangement.

PRECEDING HER down the church aisle were five attendants and two flower girls. Cynthia Lata of Glenview, Jodi's college roommate, was maid of honor.

The bride's two young sisters were flower girls. Christi, 8, and Terri, 6, wore green dotted swiss dresses trimmed with daisies and carried white baskets of green and white daisies and straw flowers.

Russell Sticken of Wheeling, the groom's brother, served as best man, and ushers were the bride's brothers, Mark and Gary Knudson; Rick Patton, Gardner, Ill.; Neil Hagen, Lake Geneva; Bob Brown, DeKalb; and Michael Mahaney, Lisle.

Jodi and Ken spent a week's honeymoon at Eagle River, Wis.

Music was special part of Anderson-Wigtil rite

Music was the key when Virginia Rae Anderson and David Norval Wigtil met and music was the theme when they were married at Bethlehem Lutheran Church in Morris, Ill., on June 23, at 2 p.m.

Virginia, a Prospect High School graduate, met David while he was traveling through with a Christian musical group and the romance budded. The couple's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Anderson, 605 S. Albert St., Mount Prospect, and the Rev. and Mrs. Norval R. Wigtil of Morris.

Virginia chose for her wedding a white satin gown overlayed with white organza. Beads and lace bordered the bodice, hem and train of the dress which featured sheer long puffed sleeves. A lace, beaded cap held her waist-length tiered veil and she carried yellow roses, pink carnations and lavender pom-pom mums.

MRS. JONATHON C. Hastad, sister of the bride, from Halstad, Minn. was the matron of honor and bridesmaid was Catherine Yunker, Mount Prospect.

Wearing dresses of yellow flocked nylon over crepe with ruffled short sleeves and Peter Pan collars the attendants preceeded the bride down the aisle. They carried lavender carnations and yellow pom-pons.

Enhancing the service was "the Lord's Prayer" sung by the bride at the altar. The congregation joined in the singing of "O Perfect Love."

Mr. and Mrs. David Wigtil

Three of the groom's brothers took part in the wedding rite. Daniel served as best man, Philip was groomsman and Paul assisted Jonathan Hastad in seating the guests.

A reception for 100 was held in the church basement.

The newlyweds will reside in Minneapolis, Minn., where the groom is enrolled in graduate school. Virginia graduated from Concordia College with a degree in French.

Jane Ashbrook on west coast as bride

Jane Marlene Ashbrook of Arlington Heights is making her home on the west coast since her June 16 marriage to Royal Harwood "Woody" Grubb Jr. of Newport Beach, Calif.

Their wedding took place in the First United Methodist Church of Arlington Heights followed by a buffet luncheon and reception in the church hall. Then the couple said goodbye to family and friends here and left for California.

They honeymooned for a week in Cambria and are making their first home in Corona Del Mar.

Jane, daughter of the Dexter Neal Ashbrooks of 416 S. Forrest, Arlington Heights, met her husband through a mutual friend. He is a graduate of Taylor University, Upland, Ind., and is cycling manager for Schwinn Bicycle Co., Los Angeles. His parents, Lt. Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Royal H. Grubb, are from Newport Beach.

JANE GRADUATED in '71 from Prospect High School and then spent two years at Northern Illinois University. In fall she will continue her studies, majoring in physical education, at Long Beach State University.

Highlighting the early afternoon ceremony, solos were sung by the groom's two sisters, Mrs. Karen Snelling and Marilyn Grubb. The bridal couple wrote their own wedding vows for the double ring service.

The bride chose a white antique satin gown, Empire styled with a yoke of rosepoint lace and long sleeves of the lace. The A-line skirt flared into a chapel train which had a wide insert of the lace.

Jane's fingertip veil was attached to an openwork Juliet crown scalloped in lace. Her bouquet was of yellow and white daisies, baby's breath and Abbey roses, carried with a Bible given to her by the groom's mother.

SUE ASHBROOK was her sister's maid of honor, gowned in a yellow daisy print with white collar and cuffs. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow and peach daisies tied with matching streamers and wore a single daisy in her hair.

Four bridesmaids came down the aisle, wearing identical dresses to Sue's but in a peach colored daisy print. Their bouquets were of peach, white and yellow daisies.

The four are Deb Palucki, Berwyn;

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Grubb Jr.

Nancy Barry, Park Ridge; Kim Andrup, Arlington Heights; and the bride's sister, Nancy Ashbrook.

ALSO IN the wedding procession was 3-year-old Jennifer Bonifacio, Arlington Heights, who wore a yellow daisy printed dress and carried a small bouquet of mixed daisies.

Arnold Book came from Grand Rapids, Mich., to be the best man. He and three of the groomsmen and attended college together and had not seen one another since graduation. They included Tom Essenberg, Arlington Heights; Steve Manganello, Upland; and Al Jackson, Elkhart, Ind. The other groomsman was David Snelling, Woody's brother-in-law.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Maybe it was the crazy weather that caused the problem, but I'm astonished by the heavy mail about carpenter ants. These insects usually nest in trees or rotting wood. If there is a way to trace the nest, apply Baygon, dichlorvos, diazinon, malathion, chlordane or lindaen. (These last two may not be around; and if they are, they are probably in much lower strength than formerly). As for protecting homes, paint on the insecticide with a small paintbrush and try to touch every area over which these ants may travel — window frames, doors, posts, baseboards, plumbing pipes and so forth. My sympathy to everyone distressed over such invasions.

Dear Dorothy: When we dug up some of our scraggly azalea bushes, we found that the roots never broke through the planter mix used by the growers. We now make sure the roots will not stay pot-bound by breaking away as much of the planter mixture as possible before planting the azalea in the ground — which should be properly prepared, of course. This problem happens with other shrubs so firmly planted in the mixes, the roots can't reach into the ground.

—E. R. Wells

Dearth Dorothy: I think my way is the easiest to get out the rings around the collars. I use a small-handled plastic scrub brush and sudsy ammonia. The shirt is laid on a flat surface with the soiled collar up. A little ammonia is poured on, brushed a few times, then washed as usual. The ring is gone. It's the simplest, cheapest thing ever and the very best.

Tip to brides: If you are serving salad in lettuce cups for lunch, it will look better if you pack it in a coffee cup and then turn it out.

All-woman college still around but changing

by PATRICIA McCORMACK

Is the all-woman college going the way of the high tea, white gloves and calling cards?

Probably not, according to a study by Educational Testing Service's College Research Center (CRC). Ninety of the female-only institutions intend to stick by their single sex status, the CRC learned.

Since 1960 more than 100 women's colleges opened their doors to men. The heyday year was 1970 when 21 women's colleges changed over. Last year, only 11 switched.

In 1960, there were 298 women's colleges in the United States. By last year 152 had either admitted men or gone out of business. Of the 146 who rode it out, however, only 90 are committed to continuing as all-girl schools. The rest have adopted a wait and see attitude.

Among the committed institutions is Cazenovia College in Cazenovia N.Y.

Its course listings reflect the college's concern with helping its students to discover their own identities. Among courses currently offered are psychology of women, sociology of women and, in the English department, feminine identity in literature.

The college also offers what some supporters of the women's movement might regard as sexist curricula. Secretarial studies and child study are two popular with students.

Dr. Vincent DeBaun, president of Cazenovia, says such courses are as important for the liberated as for the non-liberated woman.

What is gone at Cazenovia as at many other all-women colleges: the finishing school image. What has arrived is career education, occupying an increasingly important place.

Dr. DeBaun said studies show a steady change between 1965 and 1970 in the attitude of college freshmen women toward their own futures. Some of the changes, undoubtedly, may be traced to the women's liberation movement.

The studies reflect a growing desire for a professional life and for postgraduate study, and a sharp decline in the wish for a family-centered life.

Dr. DeBaun rejects the idea that the all-woman college is an old-fashioned thing.

"It isn't the women's college that's old-fashioned; it's the outmoded thinking that originally led to it.

"The idea was that it would be bad for girls to be distracted by boys while they're in class."

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Ordinance No. 73-79

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING ARTICLE VI OF CHAPTER 19 BY ADDING INCINERATORS TO THE MUNICIPAL CODE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, 1965

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS:

SECTION ONE: Article VI of Chapter 19 including Section 19-601 dealing with Penalties is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Article VI Incerators

Section 19-601 Definitions. For the purposes of this Article the following words or terms shall be given the meaning indicated:

(a) Incinerator. An "incinerator" is a combustion apparatus in which refuse is burned.

(b) Person. Person shall mean any natural person, partnership, trust, corporation or association. Whenever used with respect to any penalty, the term "person," as applied to partnerships or associations, shall mean the partners or members thereof, and as applied to trusts or corporations, shall mean the trustees or officers thereof.

Section 19-602 Permit Required.

It shall be unlawful for any person to operate an incinerator within the Village, unless he shall have a valid village operation permit for each incinerator.

(a) Permit renewable. The permit to operate and maintain an incinerator shall be renewed each year on or before January 1st.

(b) Application. An application for a village permit to operate an incinerator shall be submitted to the Director of Health Services, on forms he shall provide, for each operation permit and renewal thereof.

Section 19-603 Operation Permit Fee

(a) The fee for each operation permit, and each renewal thereof, shall be fifteen dollars ($15.00).

(b) All fees shall be made payable to the Village of Arlington Heights.

Section 19-604 Compliance with County and State.

Prior to the issuance of any permit, the applicant must submit to the Director of Health Services satisfactory proof of an installation permit and operating permit in conformance with the appropriate statutes, ordinances, and regulations of the County of Cook and the State of Illinois.

Section 19-605 Operation and Maintenance.

All incinerators shall be maintained in a clean and sanitary condition, and all equipment shall be maintained in a satisfactory operating condition during the periods in which the incinerator is in use.

Section 19-606 Existing Incinerators.

Owners of existing incinerators shall comply with the provisions of this ordinance within 60 days of its passage, approval, and publication in the manner provided by law.

Section 19-607 Revocation of Permit.

Any permit granted hereunder may be revoked by the Director of Health Services for failure, by permit holder to comply with the provisions of this Article, or whenever, in the sound discretion of the Director of Health Services, further operation under such permit creates a menace to health and safety of the residents of the surrounding area; provided, however, that the permit holder may appeal to the Board of Trustees for a hearing on such revocation. No appeal under this Article, however, shall entitle permit holder to continue operation of the incinerator pending the action before the Board of Trustees. Nothing in this section shall be construed as limiting the penalty provisions of this Chapter.

Section 19-608 Building Code.

Incinerators shall conform to building regulations."

SECTION TWO: There is hereby added to Chapter 19 of the Municipal Code of Arlington Heights, 1965, Article VII establishing penalties which section shall read as follows:

The pride of Prospect Heights — Greg Luzinski — steps up for a practice swing (left), then takes the time to sign a young fan's scorecard at his "day" Thursday.

Hundreds turn out for big No. 19's day

by TOM CARKEEK

If you noticed long streams of young boys with baseball caps bearing the letters PH outside Wrigley Field around 10 a.m. last Thursday, you were looking at a group that was about to pay tribute to a man who has carried part of the Northwest suburbs away with him and into the major leagues.

These enthusiastic youngsters, members of the Prospect Heights little league, had come to Chicago to show their fervor for a fellow from their ranks only a decade earlier. Now he has already stamped himself as one of the most feared hitters in the National League.

The kids turned out to see Mr. Gregory Michael Luzinski, who played his little league baseball in Prospect Heights, attended Notre Dame of Niles High School, and currently is batting cleanup for the Philadelphia Phillies.

It was "Greg Luzinski Day," organized by Prospect Heights barber Jim Seveska and attended by approximately 550 little leaguers and adults.

The highlight of the pre-game ceremonies in a special section of the left-field grandstands occurred when Roy Swanson, president of the Prospect Heights little league, presented Greg with a plaque inscribed as follows:

"For bringing honor to the Prospect Heights little league, this award is presented to Greg Luzinski in appreciation."

Big No. 19 mingled with the admiring youngsters, signing autographs, shaking hands, just talking — bringing the image of a professional baseball player to the throngs of worshiping kids.

"Greg was just really great and cooperative all the way," Seveska said. "He spent a lot of time up in the stands and gave the kids a chance to meet him. All the kids had a great time. And Greg responded very nicely during the game, too, with a home run and a single."

Luzinski, a muscular 22-year-old who stands 6-foot-1 and weighs in at 220 pounds, appeared just as gracious and enthused as did the youngsters who were on hand to meet him.

"I couldn't attend the Day myself even though I wanted to," Seveska said, "but I'll tell you, I got a very gratifying feeling knowing the kids showed up and had so much fun. If these kids work as hard as Greg did when he was playing in the little leagues, who knows? We might have another major leaguer from Prospect Heights someday."

Luzinski's entire family and several hometown friends turned out for the tribute. Seveska said, "They're all very proud of him."

"We couldn't have asked for a more beautiful day," Seveska said, referring to the 90-degree heat and clear, sunny skies. "And the people at Wrigley Field who helped us with the group rates and the special seating section were extremely cooperative. It just makes me certain that all the trouble and effort that went into making the Day was worthwhile."

Seveska said he couldn't speak highly enough of all the help he received in planning and executing the details for Greg Luzinski Day.

"I want to thank all those connected with Greg Luzinski Day," he said. "Without the help of Roy Swanson and his staff at the little league and Ray Worsley, who represented the Prospect Heights Old Town Shopping Association and took care of painting the banners, and the cooperation we received from the sports staff of Paddock Publications, there could never have been a Greg Luzinski Day."

Seveska paued for a moment, then added, "Maybe I'll do it again next year."

If he decides to go through with it again, no one will say it's undeserved. Greg Luzinski remains the fierce competitor and superb athlete he was through his little, league, high school and legion baseball days in the Northwest suburbs.

Greg didn't say where he was going to put the plaque he was given, but he'll undoubtedly have to do a lot of reshuffling because many more awards will come to him as he rises in the National League — and continues to keep Prospect Heights on the map.

Herald gives clues for 'Name the Pros' contest

You've all had a good look at our "magnificent seven" in the Herald's "Name the Pros" contest, right?

Still, some of you haven't entered because you're not sure who everybody is, right?

So we can give everybody a shot at winning an autographed picture of either Arnold Palmer or Lee Trevino, we're adding a hint as to each professional's identity. Let's face it, not everybody had the chance to see these men perform at the Western Open recently.

Here are the hints:

Golfer No. 1 — Bobby captured the PGA title in 1964.

Golfer No. 2 — Steve was the U.S. Amateur champion in 1969.

Golfer No. 3 — His first name is the same as the famous "Sesame Street" frog.

Golfer No. 4 — One of only a few players wearing shades.

Golfer No. 5 — Many have drawn a blank with this Homeric figure.

Golfer No. 6 — Confused many times with Johnny Miller, this young golfer finished second to Billy Casper in the Western.

Golfer No. 7 — Old "Sarge" isn't smiling too much because of the long drought since winning the U.S. Open in 1969.

In addition to the framed, autographed photograph, the two winners (earliest post mark will break ties) will also be pictured in the Herald sports pages with their prizes.

This will probably be the last week for this contest, so get your guesses in soon.

Just write the name of the golfer next to the number identifying him. Send your postcard or letter to:

Shock Wheeling, 6-5

Storybook finish for Lions

by TOM CARKEEK

A storybook finish catapulted Logan Square over Wheeling and back into Ninth District title contention Friday night at St. Viator high school.

Wheeling, trailing 3-0 and possessing only one hit after five innings, scored twice in the sixth and once in the seventh to send the game into extra innings. Post 1968 rode its momentum to two more runs in the top of the eighth only to watch its valiant comeback fade into defeat as Logan Square pushed across three runs after two were out and came away with a 6-5 victory.

The verdict was all the more ironic in that Lion relief hurler Jim Dumke gave up a double to Wheeling's Bob Peter in the eighth that made it 5-3, but Dumke blasted a double of his own off Peter — to tie the game, then tallied the winning run two pitches later.

The win was Logan Square's fifth straight in the Ninth District and evens their league slate at 5-5. Wheeling tumbled to 3-3. Four clubs are now playing .500 ball and are tied for second, but Arlington Heights' 6-1 mark remains far out front.

A leadoff home run by Wheeling's Pat McGinn in the seventh knotted it at 3-3, but Lion starter Jim Miller struck out the next two batters. Miller then hit a man and issued a single before Coach Larry Nomellini removed him in favor of Mike Cook. Cook set down John Theriault on strikes.

After Logan Square failed in the seventh, Dumke came on and got Keith Steelman on a fly ball and Terry Kukla on a popup. After he walked Bob Burke and McGinn, Peter blooped his double into short right-center. Ron Henricks fanned to end the inning. Pat Rooney started the Lion eighth with a hit to left. After Jim Bucaro flied out, Tom Chapman walked on four pitches. Pinch-hitter John Abbs fanned for the second out.

Then Dumke lined a shot to left that Slepicka misjudged. The ball rolled all the way to the fence, and the score suddenly was tied again. Foster hit a line drive down the left-center power alley to bring in Dumke with the winning run.

Miller had gotten in trouble in the sixth when Slepicka and Jeff Brisson both singled and Theriault drew a walk to load the bases. Steelman's sacrifice fly and Kukla's fielder's choice gave Wheeling its first two runs.

That pair and McGinn's seventh-inning homer offset Logan Square's three second-inning tallies. Chapman doubled to left and Miller singled up the middle before Foster doubled to right-center, scoring both teammates. Ed Collins then lifted a high fly to left that was lost in the sun and fell safely, scoring Foster.

The Lions hit Wheeling starter George Pattee hard, mounting threats in each of the first three innings. Pattee was inconsistent, so Coach Bob Grybach yanked him for Peter when the fifth inning opened. Peter threw almost as many pitches in relief as did Pattee starting.

Dumke is now 5-2, tops on the Lion staff. Foster, Collins and Stan Bobowski all had two hits for Logan Square, while Brisson and Peter each had a pair for Wheeling.

Logan Square	.....003 000	03—	6-11-0

The Lions encountered little resistance Thursday night against Mundelein, squelching the visitors in a non-league affair, 5-2.

Dumke hurled three hitless innings and picked up the win. Dave Sherrow, a recent addition to Larry Nomellini's squad, helped out in relief.

Logan Square took a permanent lead in the first when Foster singled and stole second, then tallied on Stan Bobowski's RBI single.

In the fourth, Steve Bobowski doubled and tallied on Bucaro's base hit. A stolen base, error and passed ball later, Bucaro was home with the Lions' third run.

Singles by Foster and Steve Bobowski and a walk to Stan loaded the sacks in the fifth and Rooney's base hit drove in the final two Logan Square runs.

Famine...feast for Prospect

Feast and famine accompanied Mount Prospect's legion team on trips to Norwood Park and Park Ridge last week as the Ninth District schedule heated up.

The Prospectors of coach Merv Fink initially suffered through a nine-inning scoreless famine against Park Ridge, but as indicated by the extra frames, Park Ridge was equally non-productive as the contest ended in a 0-0 deadlock.

Each club will be awarded with one-half game won and one-half game lost in the standings as the result of a spectacular pitching duel between Prospect's Larry Monroe and Park Ridge's John Klippstein.

The famine ended abruptly, though, as Mount Prospect conquered Norwood Park, 6-2 the very next day and rounded its record off at 3-3-1.

THE FAMINE

Although each squad was presented with a variety of scoring opportunities, neither could dent the plate as both pitchers took complete command of the contest.

Monroe fired a nifty three-hitter over the nine-inning grind while Klippstein countered with a four-hitter. Klippstein held the edge in strikeouts, 11-10, while Monroe, incredibly, issued the only pass of the game.

Mount Prospect squandered a scoring opportunity in the very first inning as a pair of early Park Ridge errors had Klippstein on the ropes.

After one was retired, both Randy Sherpin and Bob Chen reached on Park Ridge boots, but Klippstein escaped the jam via a strikeout and a fly to left.

The Prospectors also had a shot in the ninth when Chen singled with one out and Rick Haaning reached on a misplay at first. But Chen was cut down at the plate and Loren Crites followed by belting a drive to right only to have the Park Ridge fielder track it down and turn it into a double play.

Gregg Fink, Jim Laing, Crites and Chen recorded Mount Prospect's hits — all singles.

THE FEAST

Prospect quickly ended the drought against Norwood Park as it cracked seven hits — three of the extra-base variety — to sting Norwood Park, 6-2.

Jim Emslie hurled the triumph on a yield of just five hits, walking four and fanning seven. But he didn't have a chance to relax until his teammates broke the contest open with two in the fifth and another pair in the sixth.

The winners broke on top with a run in the first inning, but had a chance to give Emslie a much bigger lead. Fink led off with a walk, Loren Crites and Bob Chen both singled, Rick Haaning hit into a fielder's choice and Ken Butzen walked, but Mount Prospect could only cash for a single tally.

Norwood Park promptly matched the score in the bottom of the first as Emslie was solved for a walk and a triple. The same scoring pattern developed in the fourth.

Mount Prospect assumed a 2-1 edge when Dale Schoenbeck, Jim Anderson, Keith Semar and pinch-hitting Ed Katzman all drew two-out walks to force in the go-ahead run, but Norwood came bouncing back in the bottom of the frame with another triple-single combination to knot the count at 2-2.

Mount Prospect finally struck it rich in the fifth when Haaning tripled and both Butzen and Schoenbeck singled for a two-run spree that was never challenged by Norwood.

The winners added two insurance markers in the sixth that found Anderson leading off the stanza with a three-bagger, Semar walking, Emslie lifting a sacrifice fly to right and Fink pushing one across on an infield groundout.

Brisson hot streak means victory for cold Wheeling

Jeff Brisson's bat continued to smoulder Saturday, and it wasn't coincidental that his Wheeling American Legion team picked up an easy 6-1 victory over visiting Norwood Park.

The success raised slumping Wheelnig's Ninth District record to 4-3 and overall mark to 11-5. Coach Bob Grybash's group had lost five of six going into Saturday's clash.

Brisson's torrid hitting and Gordie Nelson's pitching were the key ingredients. Brisson, who after Saturday had nine hits in his 11 at-bats, was three for four Saturday with four runs scored and three stolen bases.

Terry Kukla also contributed much with a three-for-four effort of his own and two runs batted in.

Nelson enjoyed a fine day on the hill with 10 strikeouts and two walks to go with seven hits allowed. He had a shutout going until two outs in the seventh.

Post 1968 jumped on top with one in the first when Kukla, Brisson and Keith Steelman singled. They added three in the third for a commanding lead when Brisson smashed a double, John Theriault walked, Bob Burke's infield hit loaded the bases, Mark Pettit walked to force in a run and Bob Peter singled in two more.

Wheeling added singletons in the fourth and sixth. Theraiult singled in one run after an error, and in the winners' final at-bat Brisson singled, stole two bases and scored on a groundout.

Norwood Park averted a shutout on a base hit, error, groundout and another single.

Grybash commented that his team has been scoring runs but the pitching and defense have fallen down in the recent cold spell. He said he felt his team should have won all of its first seven District games.

Baird & Warner team captures rare sweep in Scratch League

It never happened before and may not happen again this year in Old Orchard Scratch League play. Baird and Warner Realty team took everything from Miles and Miles Insurance — all five matches, low ball and low total, good for seven points. Even par scores of 36 by Don Hager and Ben Kronn moved the Baird team from seventh place to third in the team standings.

Even though Peters and Co. Realty earned four and one half out of seven points in its duel, with Arlington Realty, the Peters team remained in next to last place. Alternate Jim Siljestrom won his match for Peters and scored a deuce on the 193-yard seventh hole.

Sauganash Corporation gained five points over Robert L. Nelson Realty as Bob Kronn carded a one-under-par 35 score which included two birdies. Jim Krueger also helped the cause with a score of 38 and a win.

League leaders Silo Restaurant and C. P. Floors split the night's winnings, 3½ to 3½ points. Alternate Harold Klapp carded his best-of-the-year score to help the Silo cause.

Special note: Bill Hugo remains unbeaten after 10 nights of play.

Bob Burrows Chevrolet remained in third place despite only three points earned against L-Nor Cleaners. Leading the way for L-Nor Cleaners was Chuck Reed.

Winners of golf balls for closest-to-the-pin shots on par three holes were Don Hager on number three, Jim Siljestrom on number seven, Don Williams on number 11 and Ralph Ganzer on number 14.

Townsend's hitting sparks Arlington over Park Ridge

by MIKE KLEIN

Behind Mark Leonhard's pitching and Dar Townsend's hitting, Arlington Heights' legion team never trailed while beating Park Ridge, 4-2, last Friday.

Post 208 improved its Ninth District record to 6-1 and moved to 10-7 overall. Park Ridge dropped to 3-3-2 in Ninth District play.

Arlington jumped off to a 1-0 lead in the first against losing pitcher Jay Liggett, who hurles for Maine West.

Bob Harth greeted Liggett with a single, stole second and moved to third on the first of two errors that inning by catcher Russ Anderson.

Leonhard drove Harth home with a booming sacrifice fly to right field, saved from being at least a triple by jim Lyons' great catch with his back to the infield.

Liggett and Leonhard became absorbed in a pitching duel that didn't begin breaking apart until Post 208 picked up two runs in the fourth.

Arlington had a chance to spread its margin in the third, but could make nothing of two hits and a walk. Allie Weichers, who played a fine shortstop, opened with a single but was picked off.

With two out, George Vukovich doubled and Leonhard walked but Greg Hauptly lined to second.

Arlington finally made progress at the plate in the fourth. Bruce Hanson singled, moved up on Liggett's wild pitch and scored on Marc Klemp's single.

Two batters later, Townsend lashed a run-scoring double to left field, sending Klemp home with the first of his two runs-batted-in.

Townsend singled home John Dillon in the sixth inning after Park Ridge had drawn within a run at 3-2.

The visitors tallied once in the fifth when Bob Lloyd doubled to right, moved to third on Leonhard's wild pitch and scored on an infield out.

Park Ridge scored a run on three singles after two outs in the sxith, Liggett getting the run-batted-in.

Leonhard threw his best ball in the first three innings, then wasn't quite as sharp in the last four. He was helped by a double play in the seventh and two earlier fine glove plays by Weichers.

Park Ridge stranded eight men, three in the fourth. Leonhard recorded eight strikeouts and had a string of five straight from the last batter in the first to the leadoff man in the third.

Liggett struck out six batters, setting many up with a good curve ball.

In Friday summer play

4 area teams victorious

Rolling Meadows, Prospect, Fremd and Wheeling posted victories in Friday action around the Northwest Division Summer League.

Here ars the results:

MUSTANG RALLY TRIPS ADDISON

Rolling Meadows, twice a victim of late-inning rallies by the opposition that proved fatal, reversed the trend while topping Addison Trail, 6-5, with a three-run surge in the bottom of the seventh frame.

Trailing 5-3 upon entering the do-or-die inning, the Mustangs promptly went to work as Jeff Dargis coaxed a leadoff pass and Joe Riplinger parked a two-run homer over the right centerfield fence to knot the score at 5-5.

Glen Zawacki kept the rally alive with another walk and after stealing second, cruised around on singles by Dave Thorstensen and Steve Breitbeil that proved to be the decisive blows.

Meadows put single tallies on the board in the third, fifth and sixth innings in support of starting hurler Keith Goeske. In the third, Bill Cannon was hit by a pitch, moved up on a wild pitch and crossed on Dan Borland's single while in the fifth, Borland cracked another safety, Jeff Dargis was hit by a delivery and Riplinger provided a sacrifice fly that was misplayed by the Addison outfield.

Their final marker before the winning rally erupted stemmed from singles by Steve Breitbeil and Brad Davidson sandwiched around a walk to Ray Pettersen. Jordan earned the victory in relief to boost Meadows over the .500 plateau at 7-6-1.

ELK GROVE FALLS

Dundee scored four unearned runs and had little trouble disposing of Elk Grove 6-3 on the Grenadiers' diamond.

Dundee tallied all six of its runs in the first four innings while Elk Grove posted single runs in the first, third and fifth. A two-out single by David Wudtke, a passed ball and John Paul's ground rule double produced the Grenadiers' first score.

In the third, base hits by Randy Romano and Wudtke and Paul's second double bore another tally. The Grens got their final run in the fifth on Romano's single. Mike Dill's base hit, a walk and a wild pitch.

Steve Sheridan was the losing pitcher. Paul went two-for-two and also walked.

VIKES FIRE BLANKS

Fremd's Mitch Gullett, with relief help from Jim Recher, shut out Crystal Lake 3-0 as the Vikings remained hot.

Gullett struck out nine and walked two in just 5 1/3 innings before Recher entered with the bases loaded and one out in the sixth and secured the last five outs.

Fremd went ahead in the third inning when with one out, no one covered home on a dribbler and Randy Kraft scored. He had walked following an error.

Two insurance runs scored in the sixth, again with one out, when Gullett singled, Matt Fox walked and Jack Kelliher tripled in both. It was a low line drive which rolled all the way to the fence after the center fielder missed it.

Gary Wennerstrom struck out nine in posting the win. Art Busby took the loss.

Pacing the Wildcats' hitting attack were Howie Brauer, Ken Margalski and Paul Groot with two hits each.

In Thursday prep action

Meadows, Wheeling romp

Thursday's Northwest Division Summer League was highlighted by victories for Rolling Meadows, Arlington, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Hersey.

Here are the results:

MUSTANGS ZAP FALCONS

Rolling Meadows rode a boisterous eight-run third inning and the six-hit pitching of John Igrasek to a resounding 10-0 thumping of Forest View.

Thirteen Mustangs paraded to the plate in the decisive third frame that found Meadows rapping six hits and chasing Falcon starter Frank Darras.

Jack Luzinski started things for the winners with a base hit and both Brad Davidson and Glen Zawacki followed suit with base knocks that produced the first tally. Before it was over, Don Howe sacrificed, Bruce Hanson blasted a two-run triple, Steve Breitbeil walked, a pair of fielder's choices, produced two more, a hit batsman loaded the bases, Davidson singled again for another run and Zawacki, also batting again in the inning, ripped his second hit for two more.

The Mustangs got the only run they needed in the first inning when Zawacki slashed his first of three hits and Hanson doubled him home. They added another in the sixth as Scott Green singled and Dan Jordan doubled him across.

Igrasek scattered six Forest View hits — two each by Darras and Tom Lunak — walking only one and fanning 11. The victory boosted the Mustangs to the .500 mark at 6-6-1.

KOZEL, BRAUER PACE 'CATS

Trailing 2-0 going into the bottom of the third, hosting Wheeling erupted for six runs en route to an 11-2 victory.

Providing the RBI punch in the third were Al Newman, Howie Brauer and Willie Kozel with two runs driven in each. The latter two were doubles.

Brauer went on to have a brilliant 4-for-4 day, including another double and four RBIs.

Kozel also did the job on the mound with 13 strikeouts while scattering eight hits. Wheeling had 14.

Of the 14 Wheeling hits, seven along with a sacrifice came in a row in the big third inning.

CARDS RALLY TO WIN

Arlington, down 2-0 over the first 4⅓ innings, received RBI singles from Jim Letzel, Steve Leonhard and Todd Schoell for the 3-2 victory.

The hosting Cardinals nearly saw their lead disappear in the final two frames, both times with the bases loaded and two outs. A Prospect batter apparently tripled in the Knight runners, but shortstop Art Busby threw the ball to first and the batter was out for missing the bag.

In the seventh, on a full count, reliefer Letzel fired a called third strike past the Knight batsman to end the game.

SAXONS HOLD ON

Schaumburg bolted out to a 7-0 lead, then held off a furious Elk Grove rally to post a 7-6 In.

The Saxons grabbed a 4-0 lead in the bottom of the first when an error and three bases on balls forced one in and a long double by Bob Poplar cleared the bases. Thus Schaumburg scored four runs on only one hit.

The winners completed their scoring in the fourth inning when Brian Youngberg singled to right, an error put runners on first and second, and Gary Frontier's double drove in both. An error by the center fielder then scored Frontier.

Elk Grove struck back in the fifth when Scott Scholten reached on a fielder's choice and later tallied via a wild pitch. They posted another single run in the sixth when Dave Wudtke and Barry Hafft singled and Scholten delivered a sacrifice fly to left center.

The Grenadiers' almost put together a game-winning charge in the seventh but came up one run short. Rick Eckardt started it off with a single and after John Paul was safe on an error, Brian Sanoshy drove in Eckardt with a single. Paul and Sanoshy moved into scoring position on the play at the plate. Paul scored on Steve Sheridan's infield out and Dave Wudtke's double drove in Sanoshy.

After a walk to Hafft and an infield hit by David Ray that loaded the bases, Scholten hit into a fielder's choice that nailed Wudtke at the plate. An error brought in one more run, but there the rally ended.

Youngberg was the winning pitcher, with relief help in the seventh. Steve Kliff was saddled with the loss.

Fifth-inning doubles by John Caruso and Dave Mnichowicz lifted Hersey to a 6-4 victory over host Crown.

Crown led 4-3 heading into the fifth. Vetta walked and stole second leading off the Hersey half of the frame. Then Caruso lashed a two-bagger that tied the game, and Mnichowicz came through with his double to score Caruso with what proved to be the wining run.

The Huskies added an insurance run in the seventh when Kevin Madden singled, stole second and tallied on Jeff Forster's base hit.

Hersey grabbed an early 1-0 lead when Paul Cortes' RBI single scored Art Hoesterey, who had singled, in the second. The Huskies boosted their margin to 3-0 in the next inning when Roger Murbach walked and stole second, went to third on Caruso's infield hit and came home on a successful double steal. Caruso later scored on an error.

Crown scored all four of its runs in the third against Hersey's Tom Niehmzow, who worked 5 1/3 innings and picked up the win. Gary Gustafson got the save in relief.

KNIGHTS SUBDUE HUSKIES

Paul Obuchowski and Mike Chumra combined for a two-hitter as Prospect whipped Hersey, 7-1, to raise its summer record to a division-challenging 9-3.

The winners erupted early in the contest and erased a 1-0 Hersey advantage with three in the bottom of the opening frame.

The Huskies jumped on top on the efforts of leadoff hitting Tom Vetta who drew a pass, stole second, advanced to third on a groundout and crossed on a wild pitch.

But Prospect responded with a trio of runs in the bottom of the frame when Mike Quade doubled, Mike Lapcewich and Kevin Kelley singled, Mike Radoll lofted a sacrifice fly and Laddie Janda singled home the third marker.

Prospect increased its bulge with a pair in the fourth derived from an error, Randy Clerk's single, Mark Lattner's sacrifice fly and Quade's second hit of the contest.

The margin increased to 6-1 in the fifth when Kelley parked a home run over the leftfield fence and climbed to 7-1 in the sixth when Clark walked, Craig Nicholas singled and Lattner was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Lapcewich took ball four to force the final marker home.

Allens, Kunkel capture titles in 1st half play of Mid-Teen Allens won easily in the American League and Kunkel without serious problems in the National League after one round of play in Des Plaines Mid-Teen baseball.

The American League leaders ran up a 7-1 record to outdistance Johnson which finished 4½-3½. Bantam and Optimists tied with 3-5 records.

Over in the National League, Kunkel finished the first round at 5½-2½, a sizable spread over Weber and Sellergren who each finished 4-4. First National won once in eight games, worst record in either division.

First round play concluded on Friday when Kunkel beat Johnson, 6-5, and Bantam slaughtered First National 15-6. Second round play began Sunday.

Other results from last week included Optimists over Sellergren 2-0, Allens over Weber 6-4 and Allens over Sellergren 2-1. Bantam failed to field a complete team against Kunkel and had to forfeit.

WEBER CAN'T HANG ON

Weber made a determined bid at upsetting the first round American League leaders, leading 4-1 after two innings, but couldn't stave off Allens which rebounded for a 6-4 win.

Allens piled up four runs in the fourth and one in the sixth to pull away for the triumph. Allens had the early lead, 1-0 against Carl Metzger, without a hit in the first.

Rick Felde reached second on an infield error, stole third and scored on Metzger's wild pitch. Weber matched that in the home first when Doug Unzicker walked and Ron Schroeder doubled him home.

Weber touched winning pitcher Jim Olsen for three runs on four singles in the second. Jeff Schwarz, Steve Semler and Unzicker had RBIs, the latter with a sacrifice fly.

Allens went on top to stay in the fourth, helped by a walk and an error. John O'Connor's single began the rally. Keith Ways reached on an error before Olsen knocked both home with his base hit. Felde and Rich Slapke also had RBIs, giving Allens a 5-4 lead.

Keith Ways drove Slapke home with Allens' final run in the sixth.

Olsen recorded six strikeouts against one walk. Metzger, the losing pitcher for Weber, gave five runs on six hits, struck out three and walked two. In relief, Bill Finninis allowed one run on four hits, struck out three and walked one over three innings.

ALLENS NIPS SELLERGREN

Three singles, the last pair after two outs, pushed home a run in the seventh as Allens got past Sellergren, 2-1.

Rick Felde began the seventh with a single off losing pitcher Jay Liggett who had 12 strikeouts and four walks for Sellergren.

Liggett recorded two outs before Rich Slapke moved Felde up with a single and Scott Blaski ended the game with a hit.

Slapke went all seven innings for Allens, allowing just two hits and a run in the fourth. The only tally against him came when Roger Blumer doubled and scored after Liggett's infield grounder was booted.

Liggett had the other hit off Slapke, a single in the seventh.

Three walks helped Allens to a 1-0 lead after three innings. Felde, Bill Slapke and Rich Slapke received free passes sandwiched around Jeff Myers' strikeout. Felde scored when Ted Godowski bounced out, third to first.

IDSTEIN OUTPITCHES JUST

Bob Idstein struck out 10 and gave just three hits to win a fantastic pitching duel against Joel Just as Optimists shutout Sellergren, 2-0.

Just allowed just one hit, Quinn Haase's first inning double, but wove his own web of doom in the fourth by issuing three walks.

Both times, the Optimists took advantage of their good fortune to score runs. Haase scored after his double when Paul Kosac's infield grounder was booted with two outs.

In the fourth, Terry Quinn scored on a double steal for Optimists' other run.

JOHNSON NEARLY COMES BACK

A base-running mistake in the second inning proved costly as Johnson fell a run short, losing 6-5, in its bid to overtake National League first round leader Kunkel.

Kunkel held a 6-1 advantage going into the home seventh but five singles produced four runs before winning pitcher Mark Eichhorn could finally retire the side.

It qas in the second that Johnson picked up one run in a comeback attempt that found Kunkel leading, 5-0, after its first at-bat.

Paul Moughamiam's single scored Mike Adams in the second. But Johnson lost another run when Gary Dunham, who had singled, tagged up from third too soon after Dave Labickas' fly ball.

Thus, Johnson could have tied Kunkel in the seventh when hits were made by Chuck Hund, Mike Kelley, Rick Simek, Labickas and Ken Ford.

Ford's single drove home two runs. Simek and Rick Nicolai also had RBIs in the seventh.

Kunkel wasted little time in hitting losing pitcher Labickas who worked four innings on a yield of six runs, eight hits, three strikeouts and three walks.

Dan Myszka opened the visitors' first with a walk, stole the next two bases and scored on Norm Hillner's single. Willett added a single before Mark Eichhorn's triple sent home two more runs for a 3-0 Kunkel lead.

Sheets followed with an RBI single, stole second and came home one batter later on a wild infield throw.

Johnson got a run back in the second, but Kunkel immediately made it a five-run game once again, 6-1, with a tally in the third. Willett singled but was forced by Eichhorn who then stole second. Sheets knocked Eichhorn home.

Kelley pitched three innings of strong relief for Johnson after Labickas was removed from the mound. He walked four and struck out none but gave just one hit.

Eichhorn allowed 10 hits, struck out two and walked two during a route job.

Mike Gavin, Rich Fredona and Mueller each collected three hits for Bantam. Gavin and Mueller had three RBIs apiece. Steve Alderson had two. Fredona, Paul Anderson, Bill Makuch, Winfred Bellan and John Jung had one RBI apiece.

Women golfers ready to tee it up

The field of more than 200 that will compete in the inaugural Mid-America Women's Amateur Golf Classic this Wednesday and Thursday at White Pines meets these two high standards:

It not only is the largest, but one of the strongest ever assembled in the midwest for an event of this kind.

Leading entrants include:

Paula Smith Sherer, Mount Prospect, Illinois State Champion of 1971-72.

Sandra Fullmer of Itasca, four times winner of the Chicago Women's District Golf Association championship, and four times winner of both the Mexican Open and Mexican Amateur crowns.

Kathy Sharpenter of Big Foot, twice champion of the Northern Illinois Women's Amateur title.

Ruth Fender, current holder of the CWDGA crown. Miss Fender is from Kishwaukee Country Club, DeKalb.

Ann Gregory of Chicago Women's Golf Club, six times winner of the Black Women's United States Open and National Amateur championships.

Barbara Slobe Donohue, Waukegan, twice a Northern Illinois Women's Amateur champion and former Illinois State champion who won her first of many Waukegan City Women's Amateurs when she was only 12 years old.

Mary Truitt, also of Chicago Women's Golf Club, who annually gives Mrs. Gregory the toughest fight for supremacy among black women golfers.

Also, 16-year-old Desiree Alley of Waukegan, who could give the new tournament a teen-age winner. Last spring, Ms. Alley was denied the right to try out for the Waukegan High School golf team on the grounds that she is a girl.

The entire field will play both days — there will be no player cuts.

The amazing total of 36 trophies will be awarded on gross and handicap scores in five flights — three to be awarded as such:

The Senior Star who blushingly admits being 50 but not yet is on Medicare.

The Super Senior Star who is 62, but doesn't golf like a Medicare eligible.

The Star of Tomorrow — the girl who shoots the low 36-hole medal score in the teenage division.

Mrs. Dorothy Pease, publisher of The Lady Golfer in Scottsdale, Ariz., also has been invited to serve as a guest speaker.

Paulette Markoff, who founded, and directs the Junior Girl division for the Northern Illinois Women's Golf Association, will act as coordinator of the Mid-America tourney.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the Wheeling Township Republican Organization were solicited of township employes through this coupon, the Herald has learned.

by BOB LAHEY
and KURT BAER

Wheeling Township highway department employes were asked to contribute for membership in the Wheeling Township Republican Organization at a brief meeting at which their paychecks were distributed.

Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen confirmed to the Herald Friday he summoned his highway crew shortly before quitting time a week ago Friday. He said the purpose of the meeting, as in previous such meetings, was "to make announcements."

The announcements at this meeting included a call for volunteers to drive vehicles in the July 4 parade of the Prospect Heights Lions Club, and a request for memberships in the township GOP organization.

Olsen said that "it was maybe imprudent of me" to ask for memberships at the same time he handed out paychecks, but he emphasized that he informed the workers that the contributions were strictly voluntary.

BY THE FOLLOWING Monday, all the five full-time and eight part-time employes of the department had made contributions of $2 for single memberships or $3 for family memberships, Olsen said.

Another full-time employe, who had not yet contributed, was discharged the day following the membership announcement "for insubordination," Olsen said.

The highway commissioner declined to discuss the circumstances of the firing, on the advice of Township Attorney Richard A. Cowen, who also is Republican township committeeman.

The employe told the Herald he was fired following a dispute with Olsen after the employe saw an "unofficial car" leaving the township garage on Saturday evening. The employe, who had worked for the department for about three years, said he followed the car and did not know the driver was Olsen until Olsen parked at his residence.

HE SAID OLSEN told him he had been washing his car at the garage, and when the employe "stated the irregularity of the act," he was fired.

Olsen said he had been testing new car-washing equipment, recently installed, so that he could demonstrate it to department employes on Monday.

The employe made no charge that his discharge was related to the membership solicitation, and Olsen stated emphatically that it was not.

Olsen said he repeated the request for GOP memberships at the highway garage Monday and that all the employes contributed "except one man who said he had forgotten about it and asked if he could bring the money the next day." Olsen said he told the man the membership drive would be over by then, but that he would put the money in and the employe could pay him back later.

At that time, he said, only the fulltime employes were informed of the firing.

Cowen told the Herald it is "absolutely not" the policy to condition "employment, payment or promotions" of township employes on political contributions.

"IN RETROSPECT, (Olsen) was unwise in mentioning membership at a meeting at which paychecks were distributed," said Cowen. "But I'm sure that he is aware that the decision of an employe to participate or not can have absolutely no bearing on his employment."

Lawrence Carrozza, former highway commissioner who is still employed with the department, said in his 13 years with the department there had been no request of employes for contributions to the GOP organization, but he added that he saw nothing wrong in asking for membership dues on a voluntary basis.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she was "very, very surprised" that employes had been asked at work to contribute to the party and said it was "absolutely not" an acceptable recruitment practice.

Valenza blames one uncleared item

TOP Party financial report 'delayed' awaiting check

by LYNN ASINOF

A report on the campaign finances of Wheeling's To Overall Progress Party (TOP) apparently has been delayed for another month because one check from the campaign has not yet cleared the bank.

Michael Valenza, who served as TOP campaign manager, earlier told the Herald that no information on the finances of his party would be released until the financial records were complete.

"I don't plan on doing anything until I get the records," he said late last month. "I'm not going to make any estimate over the phone."

Valenza, a former village trustee, has been unavailable for further comment on the release of the TOP financial records since the Herald reported a federal grand jury is investigating building and zoning practices in Wheeling.

TOP TREASURER Roberta Krause said Friday she received the party's bank statement for the month of June. She said one of two outstanding checks have cleared the bank, but that one final check must be cleared before the records are complete.

Mrs. Krause said she would be willing to turn the records over to Valenza at any time. "But I don't know what Mike wants to do," she said. "I haven't been able to get ahold of him."

Valenza has repeatedly delayed releasing the financial records of the TOP campaign. Immediately after the April 17 election, he said the records would be available by the beginning of May. Since then he has delayed releasing the records six times.

Mrs. Krause said that although the records are not technically complete, she does have information on how much the party spent and how much was collected in donations. She said, however, that she was not at liberty to release this information without Valenza's approval.

"That has to come from Mike," she said. "That was the arrangement."

ACCORDING TO the five candidates who ran on the TOP ticket, Valenza was the only person who handled finances for the election campaign. They said they had nothing to do with finances either during or after the campaign, and said they have never been contacted about releasing the information.

Even the assistant campaign manager for the TOP party, Dick Massa, said he had nothing to do with party finances. In fact, Massa resigned his position in March because he was given little responsibility in making campaign decisions.

The finances came into question when candidates of the opposing Wheeling Independent Party (WHIP) challenged the amount of money being spent by the TOP party. The WHIP candidates noted that

Flood-control program planned for two parks

by JILL BETTNER

Wheeling park officials are working with the village board on a flood-control program to make the Heritage Park and Husky Park retention basins usable for recreation.

The ground is wet at both basins most of the time, making them unusable for any type of leisure activity.

A study, prepared by engineering consultant Herbert G. Poertner, outlines a plan to solve the problems at the basins to free them for recreation. The plan will also increase the flood control capacity of both facilities.

In a meeting last Thursday night with Village Trustee Bill Hein and Village Mgr. George Passolt, the park board approved the concept of the proposed plan. The commissioners requested more information on some parts of the lengthy report, but agreed to cooperate with the trustees in studying the feasibility of the recommendations.

THE REPORT calls for the construction of a channel around the basin at Heritage Park that would allow water from minor storms, that presently empties into the basin, to bypass the facility and go directly into the Wheeling Drainage Ditch. The channel would also collect sediment that now fills the basin and causes weed growth.

Poertner recommended that the basin be deepened to hold 10 feet of water in the center during normal weather conditions. He said this depth would support fish life. Pumps would be installed to maintain the stable water level.

The design of the Heritage Park basin, contained in the report, shows the chan-

PAM MILLET puts the finishing touches on a clay pig she made this summer in an art course being offered by School Dist. 21. Students in the class use a variety of media to explore different ways of expressing their creativity and artistic talent.

Beauty here is in eyes of beholder

by JILL BETTNER

Paper butterflies and fat pink clay pigs laze around on tables, but the human inhabitants of Room 118 at Riley School in Arlington Heights are hard at work this summer.

The butterflies, the pigs and lots of other things in the room are their creations. They made them in the past three weeks of an art class being offered by School Dist. 21.

Dist. 21 serves Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and portions of unincorporated Prospect Heights.

The products of young imaginations are projects that crowd the desks, line the walls of the classroom and fill the showcase in the school hall.

THE CHILDREN, who range in age from eight to 13 years old have experimented with all types of media.

Some of the things they've made include reed baskets, burlap wall hangings stitched with yarn, mobiles, collages, watercolors, decorative containers and clay sculptures.

"My goal for the class is to help the kids learn to enjoy art and give them several different kinds of art experiences," said instructor Tobi Abrams.

Combining their natural curiosity about the out-of-doors with the technique of assembling materials for a collage, the students have created "environmental sculptures." The sculptures feature materials picked up on field trips around the school and include rocks, an old cigarette lighter, tin cans.

THE STUDENTS have also turned rocks, collected outside the classroom, into fascinating little animals, painting the rocks and adding scraps of material to make them resemble real creatures or creating their own new breeds.

In the last week of classes, plans are to experiment with sandcasting, printing and tie-dyeing shirts, Mrs. Abrams said.

"Kids have built-in creativity," she commented. "They really need more time for art than they normally get during the regular school year."

Drainage ditch endorsed as a wildlife refuge

The Wheeling Plan Commission has endorsed a proposal to make the banks of the Buffalo Creek-Wheeling Drainage Ditch a wildlife preserve, but apparently is not sure how to pursue the project.

Esther Davis, 15 E. Jeffrey Ave., presented her proposal for a wildlife preserve to the commission at the recommendation of the village attorney. Plan commission members, however, said they would need legal counsel before they could take any action to implement the program.

"I think you have a very good idea, but I don't know what steps we could take," said Herb Lortz, chairman of the plan commission. He said the commission should probably contact Village Atty. Paul Hamer for his opinion of the project.

COMMISSION MEMBER Wilfred Sommer said the project would take a great deal of research to develop because of legal matters involved.

Village Mgr. George Passolt said when he first heard the proposal, he thought the program would only require getting easements along the creek banks. He noted that the village already requests such easements to allow for the cleaning and proposed widening of the creek.

Members of the commission, however, said that these easements do not prevent developers from clearing away natural vegetation. They also noted that although the developers have granted easements along the creek, the property is still privately owned.

For this reason, Passolt suggested that Mrs. Davis might begin her project by contacting the park district. He said she could begin with a small section of the creek which borders park land, and then expand as the legal matters were explored.

AS PART OF her program, Mrs. Davis suggested that the areas bordering the creek be left in their natural state, adding only trees and wildfowers native to the area.

"This would provide an excellent nature study area for schools, scouts and interested citizens close to home," she said. "In cases where property is privately owned, we could ask the owner if they would like to participate in the community program."

Mrs. Davis said the village might also want to initiate a program of transplanting trees and plants along the creek to give a more even ground coverage. She said the village could also begin planting trees further back from the banks to provide vegetation in case the creek is widened.

According to Mrs. Davis, the program to preserve the natural state of the creek is important because of rapid development in the Wheeling area.

"AS YOU ALL know, there isn't much land left in Wheeling, and I feel if we don't do something we're going to be sorry," she said. "Due to the population explosion, changes in growth patterns in the suburbs and lack of space, the time for planning will be behind us all too soon."

Mrs. Davis said she hoped the project would not create "legal entanglements since this would be a moral commitment on the part of the people and the village."

Members of the commission said the project would also involve many different groups in the community, including the boy scouts, an ecology group at Wheeling High School and other interested residents.

The commissioners said they would investigate the project further and report back to Mrs. Davis when they had more information.

Flood-control program planned for two parks

nel uncovered. Park Board Pres. Gus Nizzi expressed concern that the open channel could become a spot for dumping garbage and a dangerous eyesore. He suggested covering the channel and making the area a plant and wildlife preserve.

"I am vehemently opposed to leaving that ditch open," Nizzi said. "I don't like the idea of another little ditch to clean up."

THE COMMISSIONERS also feared plans to connect the proposed channel around the basin to the 60-inch pipe under the Soo Line railroad tracks at the west end of Heritage Park would interfere with construction of a proposed maintenance garage in that area.

However, Passolt said he did not think the channel would prevent building the garage.

Mrs. Esther Davis, 15 East Jeffery Ave., asked if the planned improvements at Heritage Park would reduce flooding to homes in the area. Two other residents of the area were also at the meeting.

"The water may still come up close to property lines there," Passolt said, "But hopefully, we'll be able to alleviate the problem."

Recommendations in the report to dry up the Husky Park basin call for the installation of a new drainage system which would allow water to be pumped out of the surrounding area before it enters the basin.

POERTNER FEELS it would also be desirable to build a channel similiar to the one proposed at Heritage Park to reroute the water around the basin. However, he said such a bypass system would be very expensive.

Passolt said the Husky Park basin is doing the job of providing retention of stormwater, but village and park officials are concerned about keeping their promise to provide recreation there.

All improvements suggested in the report were designed with the intention of preserving as much plant and wildlife as possible, Hein said.

"We're very conscious of the wildlife and our greenbelt here," he added. "A lot of effort has gone into this to keep the land the same."

TOP financial statement still 'delayed'

TOP held several large cocktail parties, distributed substantial amounts of campaign literature, and erected several large campaign signs in the village.

The WHIP party released its financial records before the April 17 election. The party treasurer reported that the WHIP spent $985 during the campaign. WHIP candidates noted that their expenses were kept at a minimum.

THROUGHOUT THE campaign, TOP candidates merely stated that their campaign funds came from the donations of TOP supporters.

Evelyn Diens, who was reelected village clerk, said finances were never discussed during any of the campaign meetings. "At the meetings I attended, I was not asked any questions nor was I involved in any discussion of the TOP finances," she said. "I have never seen the books in any campaign and I have never asked to. I have never concerned myself about it."

Mrs. Diens said she knew the contributions which financed the campaign "came from friends, but I don't know what friends."

Several Wheeling residents have expressed concern over the delay in releasing information on the TOP finances. The residents have said that there would be no reason to withhold the information if Valenza had nothing to hide.

Walker's folly?

Gas station operator scoffs at highway proposal

by JOE SWICKARD
and BETTY LEE

Leonard Klaybor doesn't think Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed highway will ever be built. And if it ever is, Klaybor said he won't like it.

"The way I see it Walker is probably a good governor, but with Mayor Daley and the rest of his clowns running things, it won't get done," he said.

Klaybor is the manager of Leonard's Colonial Standard gas station at U.S. Rt. 12 and Quentin Road, just west of the village of Kildeer, a tiny Lake County town near Long Grove.

His service stationis several miles to the west of the proposed Interstate Highway Gov. Walker announced last week as his alternative to the Crosstown Expressway.

Klaybor will not be in the path of the new road, but he will definitely feel the effects. "If they build it, forget it for me. I'm dead," he said.

HIS STATION is just a year old. It is scrubbed, neat and well lighted. Klaybor has the kind of station that is pictured in magazine ads to illustrate the gasoline dealer as a neighborhood businessman.

"I'll just have to go under if they put an expressway here in the area. The only thing keeping me afloat now are those stoplights on the corner. If those cars go by at 80 or 90, I won't stand a chance. And if the road doesn't go by here, it'll drain off a lot of customers. I don't see how I can make it," he said above the highway noise.

"It's always been my dream to have my own station. But the way everything's going I might just as well close up and work for somebody else. It takes four to five years to get on your feet, if everything goes the way it should. But with gas shortages, company pressure and expressways, I just don't know. Do I have much invested? Just about $45,000 in loans and notes. I'm just scratching now, I don't know what'll happen."

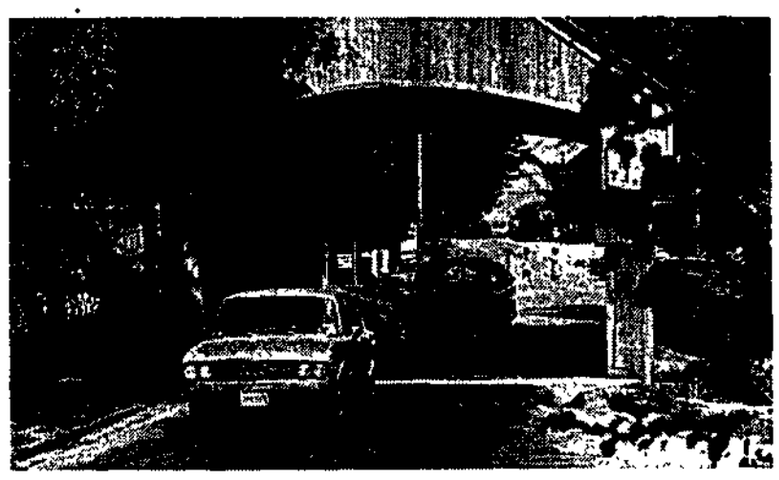
The countryside through which the interstate would run is a pleasant jumble of truck farms, nurseries, massive estates and new weekend hideways.

The ground rolls gently with slight swells extending from the Wisconsin moraines to the north. The fields are bordered by thick groves of trees. Cardinals and jays dart through the stands of woods.

Gov. Walker put a $294 million price tag on the project. About $72 million of this is planned for land acquisition. The state figured a cost of $1.31 million per mile for acquiring the right-of-way. This comes out to about $37,400 an acre.

A spokesman for the state said the figures were "very, very rough guesstimates." The quality of the land and whether it is developed would affect the final cost, he said.

LONG GROVE stands apart from the usual Northwest suburb. A restored village as a commercial enterprise is reached by means of the blacktops off the highway.



THE RUSTIC covered bridge will soon stand beside Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed "Crosstown Alternative."

Poised to the south of the village is the improved extension of Rt. 53, the basis for the new interstate.

The manager of the Crossroads store in Long Grove is used to the idea of the concrete march through the town. A new improved Rt. 53 has been in the planning stage for years before Gov. Walker tagged it the alternative to the Crosstown.

"Most people here have resigned themselves to the idea of having this built. The village opposed it. It splits the village in half. But it won't affect the business district much," he said.

But the manager of Ginny's Gift Shop in Long Grove thinks the highway would provide a more direct route to the village.

"People have problems finding the place," she said of the asphalt cut-offs that now lead to town.

Nick Nohl drives a truck for the Elgin Paper Co. and he looks forward to the new road.

"It's really what we need to get us around the city, especially if you're a trucker. These areas are getting built up and the people need a road," he said.

Nohl, although he likes the governor's plans, is not satisfied. "We also need that crosstown road. It's rough driving through the streets downtown."

L. Koch owns 20 acres of farm land outside the village of Hawthorne Woods. He also operates a small produce stand on Old Higgins Road.

"Where the hell are they going to put it, I want to know. They should put it through the new homes. They are the ones who want it. Why should they cut up farm land? What's a person to do if he's got some acres over here and another little plot over there? You tell me. What the hell are they going to do?"

ALTHOUGH KOCH fears for himself and the other farmers in the area, the fields have steadily been giving way to developers for some time.

Marjorie Taylor works in the Ela Township Office, Lake Zurich, which encompasses part of the proposed route.

"The farmers are selling out all around here. They can't afford to farm here anymore on a small scale. Since the government cut back on the subsidies, the farmer is finding it pretty hard. Now they're cutting up the farms for the developers."

The new road would be west of the village, but Mrs. Taylor sees benefits in that. "It'll get the trucks out of town. We don't have room for them any more. They can just roll by us."

Mundelein straddles the path for the highway. The small businessman there looks to the future and likes what he foresees.

Some like Edd Miller are optimistic about the road and its benefits to his gas station.

"IT WOULD HELP this area considerably since there's not much going on. It'd help the area grow," he said.

He can already see growth. A Holiday Inn opened across the road just last month and a new shopping center is going up just down the road.

Miller's father Shirl manages the station for him and he makes no bones about his view of Walker's announcement, "We'd love it."

The northern extension of the anticipated interstate is about 20 miles from Long Grove up to Grayslake and then to the east. And feelings like the road itself, run both ways.

Panel seeks to deny builder driveway exit from office

Members of the Wheeling Plan Commission have recommended that the village board deny builder Richard Calfa permission to have a driveway from his office building at 1111 W. Dundee Road exit onto Redwood Trail.

The commission members said that while they did not favor the alternative two driveway system onto Dundee Road, they felt Calfa should be held to the testimony he gave before zoning for the building was approved.

Although Calfa testified during zoning hearings that his driveways would enter and exit onto Dundee Road, he has since changed his driveway design. Residents on Redwood and Willow Trails are now protesting that the driveway exit on to Redwood Trail is causing traffic problems and is a danger to their children.

HERB LORTZ, chairman of the plan commission, said that the two driveway system promised during the zoning hearings was poor planning.

"Unfortunately, I was not at that zoning hearing," he said. "If I had known he was going to put two driveways on Dundee Road within a couple hundred feet, I would have raised some hell, because that is poor planning."

Lortz said, however, that Calfa should be held to his original promises. "This is what the gentleman promised, and I guess this is what he is going to be left with," he said.

Other members of the plan commission agreed whth Lortz. "He has obviously changed the concept of the building since the zoning," said Wilfred Sommer. "I have no sympathy for the man."

The recommendation of the plan commission is the latest in a series of opinions rendered on the matter by various village agencies. Both the police department and the building department have endorsed the driveway exit onto Redwood Trail with a forced right hand turn construction.

The matter is scheduled to come before the village board for final consideration Monday night.

Village to consider gas station remodeling

The Wheeling Village Board tonight will consider a request for rezoning the southeast corner of Dundee and Elmhurst roads to allow the remodeling of the gas station.

The property is not currently zoned for service stations because of new village zoning codes. In order to remodel the present building, the property must therefore be rezoned.

THE BOARD is also scheduled to consider preliminary plans for an industrial area east of Wheeling Road north of Palatine Road. The proposed industrial development includes a new building for the Enterprise Paint Division of the International Silver Co. The firm manufactures water-base paint.

Recommendations for an apartment-commercial development behind the Union Hotel, 124 S. Milwaukee Ave., also were scheduled for tonight's meeting. At the request of the developer's attorney, however, discussion of this project has been postponed until later in the month.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the Wheeling Township Republican Organization were solicited of township employes through this coupon, the Herald has learned.

by BOB LAHEY
and KURT BAER

Wheeling Township highway department employes were asked to contribute for membership in the Wheeling Township Republican Organization at a brief meeting at which their paychecks were distributed.

Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen confirmed to the Herald Friday he summoned his highway crew shortly before quitting time a week ago Friday. He said the purpose of the meeting, as in previous such meetings, was "to make announcements."

The announcements at this meeting included a call for volunteers to drive vehicles in the July 4 parade of the Prospect Heights Lions Club, and a request for memberships in the township GOP organization.

Olsen said that "it was maybe imprudent of me" to ask for memberships at the same time he handed out paychecks, but he emphasized that he informed the workers that the contributions were strictly voluntary.

BY THE FOLLOWING Monday, all the five full-time and eight part-time employes of the department had made contributions of $2 for single memberships or $3 for family memberships, Olsen said.

Another full-time employe, who had not yet contributed, was discharged the day following the membership announcement "for insubordination," Olsen said.

The highway commissioner declined to discuss the circumstances of the firing, on the advice of Township Attorney Richard A. Cowen, who also is Republican township committeeman.

The employe told the Herald he was fired following a dispute with Olsen after the employe saw an "unofficial car" leaving the township garage on Saturday evening. The employe, who had worked for the department for about three years, said he followed the car and did not know the driver was Olsen until Olsen parked at his residence.

HE SAID OLSEN told him he had been washing his car at the garage, and when the employe "stated the irregularity of the act," he was fired.

Olsen said he had been testing new car-washing equipment, recently installed, so that he could demonstrate it to department employes on Monday.

The employe made no charge that his discharge was related to the membership solicitation, and Olsen stated emphatically that it was not.

Olsen said he repeated the request for GOP memberships at the highway garage Monday and that all the employes contributed "except one man who said he had forgotten about it and asked if he could bring the money the next day." Olsen said he told the man the membership drive would be over by then, but that he would put the money in and the employe could pay him back later.

At that time, he said, only the fulltime employes were informed of the firing.

Cowen told the Herald it is "absolutely not" the policy to condition "employment, payment or promotions" of township employes on political contributions.

"IN RETROSPECT, (Olsen) was unwise in mentioning membership at a meeting at which paychecks were distributed," said Cowen. "But I'm sure that he is aware that the decision of an employe to participate or not can have absolutely no bearing on his employment."

Lawrence Carrozza, former highway commissioner who is still employed with the department, said in his 13 years with the department there had been no request of employes for contributions to the GOP organization, but he added that he saw nothing wrong in asking for membership dues on a voluntary basis.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she was "very, very surprised" that employes had been asked at work to contribute to the party and said it was "absolutely not" an acceptable recruitment practice.

Lieberman proposal favored, 4-1

Planners reverse position, back office building plan

The Buffalo Grove Plan Commission has reconsidered and decided to recommend that the village board approve an annexation and rezoning request by local real estate broker Stan Lieberman.

The commission voted 4-1 in favor of Lieberman's request to construct an additional office building next to two others he is planning. The site is on the north side of Dundee Road, west of Golfview Terrace.

On June 20, the commission made no recommendation because it did not get a majority vote of the quorum present at the meeting. Chairman Carl Genrich said the commission took another vote on the project because it favors giving the village board a recommendation on every proposal that is brought before it.

A group of homeowners oppose the project because they feel it is not in the best interests of the single-family homeowners in the vicinity. Several homeowners said the additional office building will damage property values. Residents who will be affected by the project include eight families on Dundee Parkway and Chenault Drive.

ONE RESIDENT said her property line is only 12 feet away from the rear of the Lieberman property Lieberman said this is true, but said the rear of his lot will be lined with shrubbery or fencing. He said the plantings will also shield the homes from trash containers in the rear of the property.

The plan commission approved Lieberman's request after he agreed to revise his plan for a driveway around the perimeter of the property. The driveway will instead be an "'L shape" and not pass through the eastern part of the property near the single-family homes.

Lieberman said the driveway around the perimeter was for security reasons. He said he would have enabled police and fire department vehicles to drive around the entire structure instead of having to go in and then turn around. The new driveway plan, however, has been approved by police and fire officials.

Several residents said they feared the office center would compound flooding problems in the area. They said their

Levitt asks single-family approval for development

A request by Levitt and Sons Inc. for permission to eliminate all duplex homes in its 50-acre Koelper-Demuth site and replace them with single-family homes is being considered by the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission.

If the change is approved it will mean 16 fewer units in the development. Original plans called for 75 single-family homes and 82 duplex units, a total of 157. With the change Levitt will construct 141 single-family homes. Ken Campbell, an engineer for Levitt, said four additional homes might be eliminated to provide additional water retention.

The plan commission held a public hearing on the proposed change Thursday night. The commission will vote and make a recommendation to the village board next week. The original plan was approved by the village board several months ago.

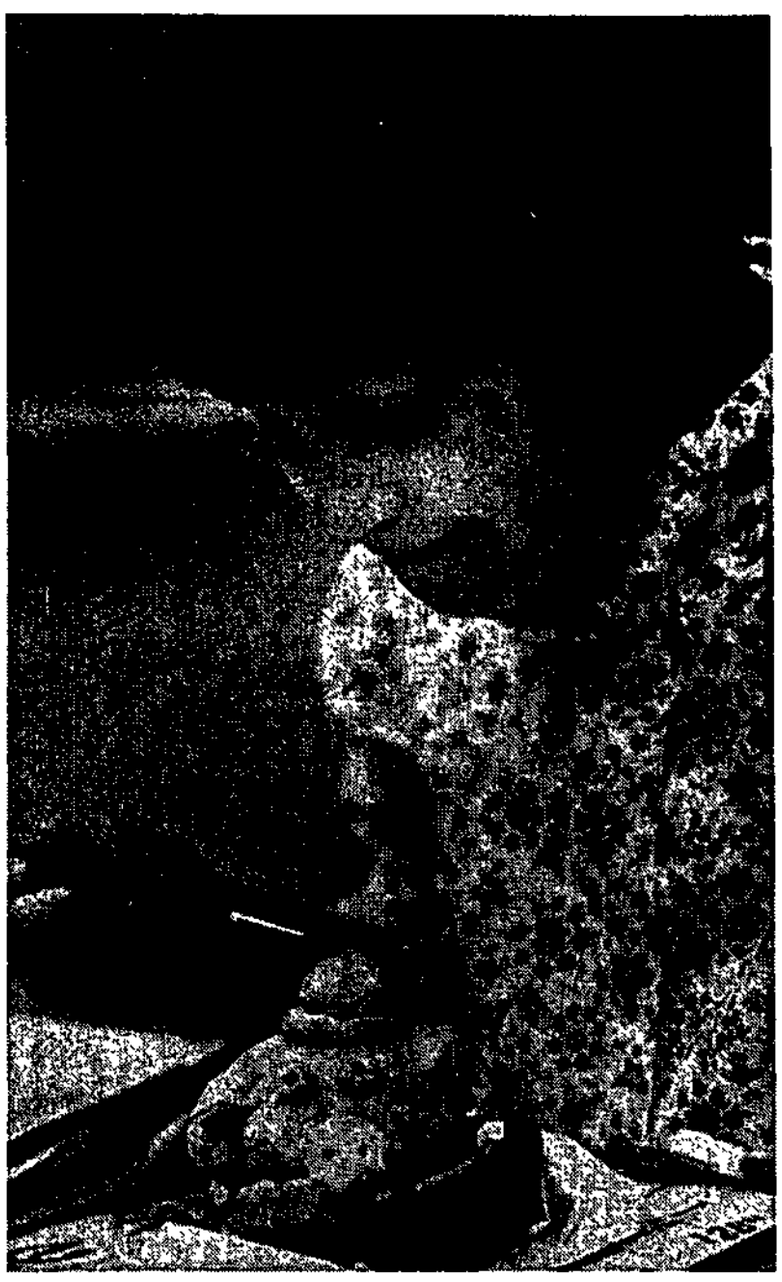
CAMPBELL SAID Levitt officials have asked for the change because they think there is a scarcity of single-family homes in the area." He said officials think fewer homes and lower densities will improve the development.

Although there will be fewer homes, Campbell said Levitt's profit will be about the same because profit on single-family homes is greater.

Campbell said Levitt plans to build three styles of single-family homes at alternate elevations in the development. He said there will be several variations on each style to prevent all the homes from looking alike. The homes will range in price from $45,000 to $55,000, Campbell said.

On the southern part of the Koelper-Demuth property Levitt plans to build 225 condominiums. On the nearby 61-acre Wagner site the developer plans 312 townhouse condominiums. Both sites are southeast of Aptakisic and Arlington Heights roads.

LAST WEEK a group of residents from Buffalo Grove's Strathmore subdivision, a Levitt development, asked the village to hold back building permits for Levitt's newest developments until problems in their homes are corrected.



PAM MILLET puts the finishing touches on a clay pig she made this summer in an art course being offered by School Dist. 21. Students in the class use a variety of media to explore different ways of expressing their creativity and artistic talent.

Beauty here is in eyes of beholder

by JILL BETTNER

Paper butterflies and fat pink clay pigs laze around on tables, but the human inhabitants of Room 118 at Riley School in Arlington Heights are hard at work this summer.

The butterflies, the pigs and lots of other things in the room are their creations. They made them in the past three weeks of an art class being offered by School Dist. 21.

Dist. 21 serves Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and portions of unincorporated Prospect Heights.

The products of young imaginations are projects that crowd the desks, line the walls of the classroom and fill the showcase in the school hall.

THE CHILDREN, who range in age from eight to 13 years old have experimented with all types of media.

Some of the things they've made include reed baskets, burlap wall hangings stitched with yarn, mobiles, collages, watercolors, decorative containers and clay sculptures.

"My goal for the class is to help the kids learn to enjoy art and give them several different kinds of art experiences," said instructor Tobi Abrams.

Combining their natural curiosity about the out-of-doors with the technique of assembling materials for a collage, the students have created "environmental sculptures." The sculptures feature materials picked up on field trips around the school and include rocks, an old cigarette lighter, tin cans.

THE STUDENTS have also turned rocks, collected outside the classroom, into fascinating little animals, painting the rocks and adding scraps of material to make them resemble real creatures or creating their own new breeds.

In the last week of classes, plans are to experiment with sandcasting, printing and tie-dyeing shirts, Mrs. Abrams said.

"Kids have built-in creativity," she commented. "They really need more time for art than they normally get during the regular school year."

Drainage ditch endorsed as a wildlife refuge

The Wheeling Plan Commission has endorsed a proposal to make the banks of the Buffalo Creek-Wheeling Drainage Ditch a wildlife preserve, but apparently is not sure how to pursue the project.

Esther Davis, 15 E. Jeffrey Ave., presented her proposal for a wildlife preserve to the commission at the recommendation of the village attorney. Plan commission members, however, said they would need legal counsel before they could take any action to implement the program.

"I think you have a very good idea, but I don't know what steps we could take," said Herb Lortz, chairman of the plan commission. He said the commission should probably contact Village Atty. Paul Homer for his opinion of the project.

COMMISSION MEMBER Wilfred Sommer said the project would take a great deal of research to develop because of legal matters involved.

Village Mgr. George Passolt said when he first heard the proposal, he thought the program would only require getting easements along the creek banks. He noted that the village already requests such easements to allow for the cleaning and proposed widening of the creek.

Members of the commission, however, said that these easements do not prevent developers from clearing away natural vegetation. They also noted that although the developers have granted easements along the creek, the property is still privately owned.

For this reason, Passolt suggested that Mrs. Davis might begin her project by contacting the park district. He said she could begin with a small section of the creek which borders park land, and then expand as the legal matters were explored.

AS PART OF her program, Mrs. Davis suggested that the areas bordering the creek be left in their natural state, adding only trees and wildfowers native to the area.

"This would provide an excellent nature study area for schools, scouts and interested citizens close to home," she said. "In cases where property is privately owned, we could ask the owner if they would like to participate in the community program."

Mrs. Davis said the village might also want to initiate a program of transplanting trees and plants along the creek to give a more even ground coverage. She said the village could also begin planting trees further back from the banks to provide vegetation in case the creek is widened.

According to Mrs. Davis, the program to preserve the natural state of the creek is important because of rapid development in the Wheeling area.

"AS YOU ALL know, there isn't much land left in Wheeling, and I feel if we don't do something we're going to be sorry," she said. "Due to the population explosion, changes in growth patterns in the suburbs and lack of space, the time for planning will be behind us all too soon."

Mrs. Davis said she hoped the project would not create "legal entanglements since this would be a moral commitment on the part of the people and the village."

Members of the commission said the project would also involve many different groups in the community, including the boy scouts, an ecology group at Wheeling High School and other interested residents.

The commissioners said they would investigate the project further and report back to Mrs. Davis when they had more information.

Planners reverse position, back office building yards often flood after heavy rains now and fear the problem will become more severe because of the run-off from Lieberman's property.

LIEBERMAN, of Stan Lieberman Realty Inc., 150 Dundee Rd., plans to move his business to the new center. He said his present office is no longer adequate.

The village board several months ago granted Lieberman a zoning change for construction of the first two buildings. Lieberman said he recently acquired an option to buy the additional four-fifth of an acre and decided to expand the project. He said he will only purchase the land if he gets the necessary zoning.

If the village board grants the zoning change it will be another deviation from the village master plan which calls for residential development of Dundee Road. Some residents, however, think the master plan is unrealistic. They have argued that the land there is too expensive for residential development.

The center will include several specialty shops in addition to offices, Lieberman said. He added he has received commitments from several doctors, lawyers and other professionals who plan to rent space in the building.

A public hearing before the village board on the project is scheduled for July 23.

Panel seeks to deny builder driveway exit from office

Members of the Wheeling Plan Commission have recommended that the village board deny builder Richard Calfa permission to have a driveway from his office building at 1111 W. Dundee Road exit onto Redwood Trail.

The commission members said that while they did not favor the alternative two driveway system onto Dundee Road, they felt Calfa should be held to the testimony he gave before zoning for the building was approved.

Although Calfa testified during zoning hearings that his driveways would enter and exit onto Dundee Road, he has since changed his driveway design. Residents on Redwood and Willow Trails are now protesting that the driveway exit on to Redwood Trail is causing traffic problems and is a danger to their children.

HERB LORTZ, chairman of the plan commission, said that the two driveway system promised during the zoning hearings was poor planning.

"Unfortunately, I was not at that zoning hearing," he said. "If I had known he was going to put two driveways on Dundee Road within a couple hundred feet, I would have raised some hell, because that is poor planning."

Lortz said, however, that Calfa should be held to his original promises. "This is what the gentleman promised, and I guess this is what he is going to be left with," he said.

Other members of the plan commission agreed whth Lortz. "He has obviously changed the concept of the building since the zoning," said Wilfred Sommer. "I have no sympathy for the man."

The recommendation of the plan commission is the latest in a series of opinions rendered on the matter by various village agencies. Both the police department and the building department have endorsed the driveway exit onto Redwood Trail with a forced right hand turn construction.

The matter is scheduled to come before the village board for final consideration Monday night.

Public works garage on tonight's agenda

The proposed public works garage, which will cost the village of Buffalo Grove an estimated $398,000, will be considered tonight by the village board in a workshop session.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson has proposed the garage be partially financed with federal revenue sharing funds. He has suggested the village take out a $300,000 loan to initially finance the garage. The loan would then be paid back over the next five years with revenue sharing funds.

In a report several months ago, Larson said lack of space for public works vehicles hampers the efficiency of the public works department. Because most of the equipment is stored outside, it deteriorates faster, as well as being subjected to vandalism, Larson said.

The proposed site for the garage is a 5.1-acre site at Lake-Cook Road and Raupp Boulevard, across from the village hall.

Salt Creek Watershed flood-control program

Busse Woods basin work to start in August

by JEANETTE DE WYZE

Work on the long-awaited Busse Woods flood control basin will begin next month, Gov. Daniel Walker announced Friday.

The basin will be a 589-acre reservoir, capable of swelling to 1,300 acres during times of flooding from Salt Creek. Located in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve in unincorporated Elk Grove Township, the basin will hold 4,210 acres feet of water.

Excavation, relocation and construction costs of the basin are expected to total about $5.5 million which the state will provide now, in anticipation of future reimbursement by the federal government.

THE BUSSE WOODS basin is part of a $26.5 million upper Salt Creek Watershed flood control program, which has been proposed since the mid-1960's. The program is designed to relieve flooding in the 33,280-acre flood plain of Salt Creek by up to 90 per cent.

The entire program calls for a series of six flood control structures along the creek, the largest of which is the Busse Woods reservoir.

Last year's heavy rains flooded thousands of homes along the creek, causing approximately $10 million in damage. The flood was the third severe one in the area since 1957.

Work on the new basin will be done in three phases, the governor's office said.

First, land which the reservoir will fill will be cleared and excavated for pools where the plan calls for deeper water than the natural topography would allow.

Then utility lines now crossing the reservoir site will be relocated. Private land which eventually will be part of the reservoir will also be purchased, although the main part of the reservoir is owned by the forest preserve district. This phase, scheduled to begin in the fall, will be completed by the time phase three begins.

PHASE THREE, scheduled to begin next summer, consists of constructing one main embankment and two lateral dams across Salt Creek and relocating a trailer park in the forest preserve away from the reservoir site.

Funds for the relocation of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Trailer Park, which houses about 700 persons, are included in the $5.5 million cost figure. However, although the park is definitely scheduled to be moved, Mark Clark, of the governor's office said the state does not yet know where the park will be moved.

Spokesmen from the Cook County Forest Preserve and the Illinois Department of Transportation, which sometimes assists with relocations, said they also have no idea where the trailer park will be relocated.

FRED LUNNSMANN, manager of the park, said Friday that he had not been notified of the relocation plans.

"Nobody's even approached the owners or anything. As far as we're concerned, we're in the dark," he said.

Lunnsmann said there is little concern among park residents about the basin, because they still don't believe they will be relocated.

"There's been talk of this for 10 or 11 years now, and they don't believe we're going to be moved," he said.

In addition to the construction costs for the site, the state is advancing half the cost of improving surrounding recreation facilities, up to a total share of $1.2 million. All the recreation improvement expenditure by the state is expected to be repaid by the federal government.

Recreation facilities will include bike paths, nature trails, fishing walls, boat docks and launch ramps, and a winter hill for skiing, tobagganing and sledding. The hill will be built with earth excavated from the reservoir site.

IN ANNOUNCING the plans, Gov. Walker said, "The people whose lives and homes are potentially threatened by flooding of Salt Creek have watched agency upon agency draw plans to provide flood control. But for one reason after another, nothing was done.

"This project has epitomized the grand-plans-but-no-action syndrome of bureaucracy tied up in red tape.

"Waiting for federal approval before proceeding would delay flood control at least another three years and possibly as many as ten."

The state has not yet received a license to begin work on the site from the Cook County Forest Preserve. James Tyndall, assistant general superintendent of the forest preserve, said that such a license will only be granted if the state's construction plans meet with approval from the local Soil Conservation Service.

Tyndall said that such approval is expected in the near future.

Attorney to study proposal

New law to rule buses 'liveries'?

Elk Grove Village may have to create a new ordinance to accommodate the proposed bus system vehicles as "liveries" if presently existing ordinances do not provide for them.

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel, chairman of the transportation committee, said the matter would have to be researched and considered by the village attorney.

Questioning of the village ordinances came during a meeting Thursday evening between the transportation committee and members of the Davidsmeyer Bus Co. Inc., which is the leading contender for the village bus system operations.

Those present at the meeting generally discussed various aspects of the fundamental structure of the bus system and also questioned the legality of many of the topics under discussion.

WHETHER THE internal bus system should accommodate the community on a dial-a-service or scheduled pick-up basis was discussed. Because the internal bus system would be accommodated by a shuttle bus serving residents with transportation to points within the village (like the library or medical center), it was suggested that the commuter bus system offering residential transportation to and from the train station should be accommodated by a larger, school size bus.

A shuttle bus was shown to committee members during the meeting so they could see what kind of shuttle transportation accommodations the bus company is offering the village.

"We just had a lot of general discussion during the meeting. We are really still exploring the situation. Members of the committee and residents of the village are all anxious to get a bus out on the road serving the community, but there are a great many variables to consider," Mrs. Vanderweel said.

"We have to consider all aspects of this bus system so that when it finally is begun it will be for everyone's benefit," she said.

As soon as the village attorney has reported on the status of present ordinances, Mrs. Vanderweel said she would like to get the committee, and possibly the entire village board, together with bus company representatives to further discuss the bus system proposal and continue with more definite plans.

Youth charged on three counts

An Elk Grove Village youth was charged with aggravated assault, careless driving and drunken driving Sunday by police after he allegedly struck an Elk Grove Village policeman.

David J. Ricinski, 18, of 556 Crest St., was driving southbound on Tonne Road at Devon Avenue when police observed him driving "in an erratic manner."

When Rucinski was stopped by police, he allegedly swore at the policemen and struck one of them in the shoulder with his fist. Later, police said he kicked one of them.

Rucinski is scheduled to appear in court today to have bond set.

A SPRINKLING of antique and curio shops, with facades resembling the shops of yesteryear, line the main streets of Long Grove, which may grow because of the new road.

Walker's folly?

Gas station operator scoffs at highway proposal

by JOE SWICKARD
and BETTY LEE

Leonard Klaybor doesn't think Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed highway will ever be built. And if it ever is, Klaybor said he won't like it.

"The way I see it Walker is probably a good governor, but with Mayor Daley and the rest of his clowns running things, it won't get done," he said.

Klaybor is the manager of Leonard's Colonial Standard gas station at U.S. Rt. 12 and Quentin Road, just west of the village of Kildeer, a tiny Lake County town near Long Grove.

His service stationis several miles to the west of the proposed Interstate Highway Gov. Walker announced last week as his alternative to the Crosstown Expressway.

Klaybor will not be in the path of the new road, but he will definitely feel the effects. "If they build it, forget it for me. I'm dead," he said.

HIS STATION is just a year old. It is scrubbed, neat and well lighted. Klaybor has the kind of station that is pictured in magazine ads to illustrate the gasoline dealer as a neighborhood businessman.

"I'll just have to go under if they put an expressway here in the area. The only thing keeping me afloat now are those stoplights on the corner. If those cars go by at 80 or 90, I won't stand a chance. And if the road doesn't go by here, it'll drain off a lot of customers. I don't see how I can make it," he said above the highway noise.

"It's always been my dream to have my own station. But the way everything's going I might just as well close up and work for somebody else. It takes four to five years to get on your feet, if everything goes the way it should. Bu.

Elementary students find pets 'delightful'

Dr. Doolittle isn't only one who can talk to animals...

by DIANE STEFANOS

Dr. Doolittle wasn't kidding when he said that anyone could talk to the animals.

Elementary students in Des Plaines' Brentwood School are discovering what delightful conversation domesticated animals and pets can offer in a unique summer school class this year.

No, there aren't any barking, meowing or chirping imitations evolving from the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school building.

Instead, 35 children are learning that talking to animals and showing them proper affection and care establishes a "language" and personal relationship between them.

"The language of animals that I'm stressing to the children is a language of love. Children seem to love animals and are fascinated by them. I'm teaching them that if you are good and affectionate to the animals they will be the same way with you," said Bonnie LaBarbera, first grade teacher at Brentwood School. She teaches the summer class being offered for the first time in the district.

TO ILLUSTRATE the "language of animals" to the children and to extend their experiences and understanding of various domesticated animals, Miss LaBarbera has had to import animals into the class from wherever she could find them.

"It's been great. So far we've had a duck, guinea pigs, gerbils and a hamster in class. They were all animals that belonged to me, my friends or one of the children in class," she said.

The animals that cannot be attained through associations will be rented from Noah's Ark Pet Center, 2469 E. Oakton St. in Elk Grove Village.

"I already feel like a chauffeur for these animals. I hope to rent some animals that the kids probably won't bring in themselves, because they don't have things like live roosters or animals like that around their house," Miss LaBarbera said.

In addition to the weekly experiences with live animals, materials such as slide and filmstrips, books and films on animals and their care and evolution are also being used in the class.

Geared toward the better understanding of how different types of animals came to be, the class is presently studying the evolution of mammals from the dinosaurs.

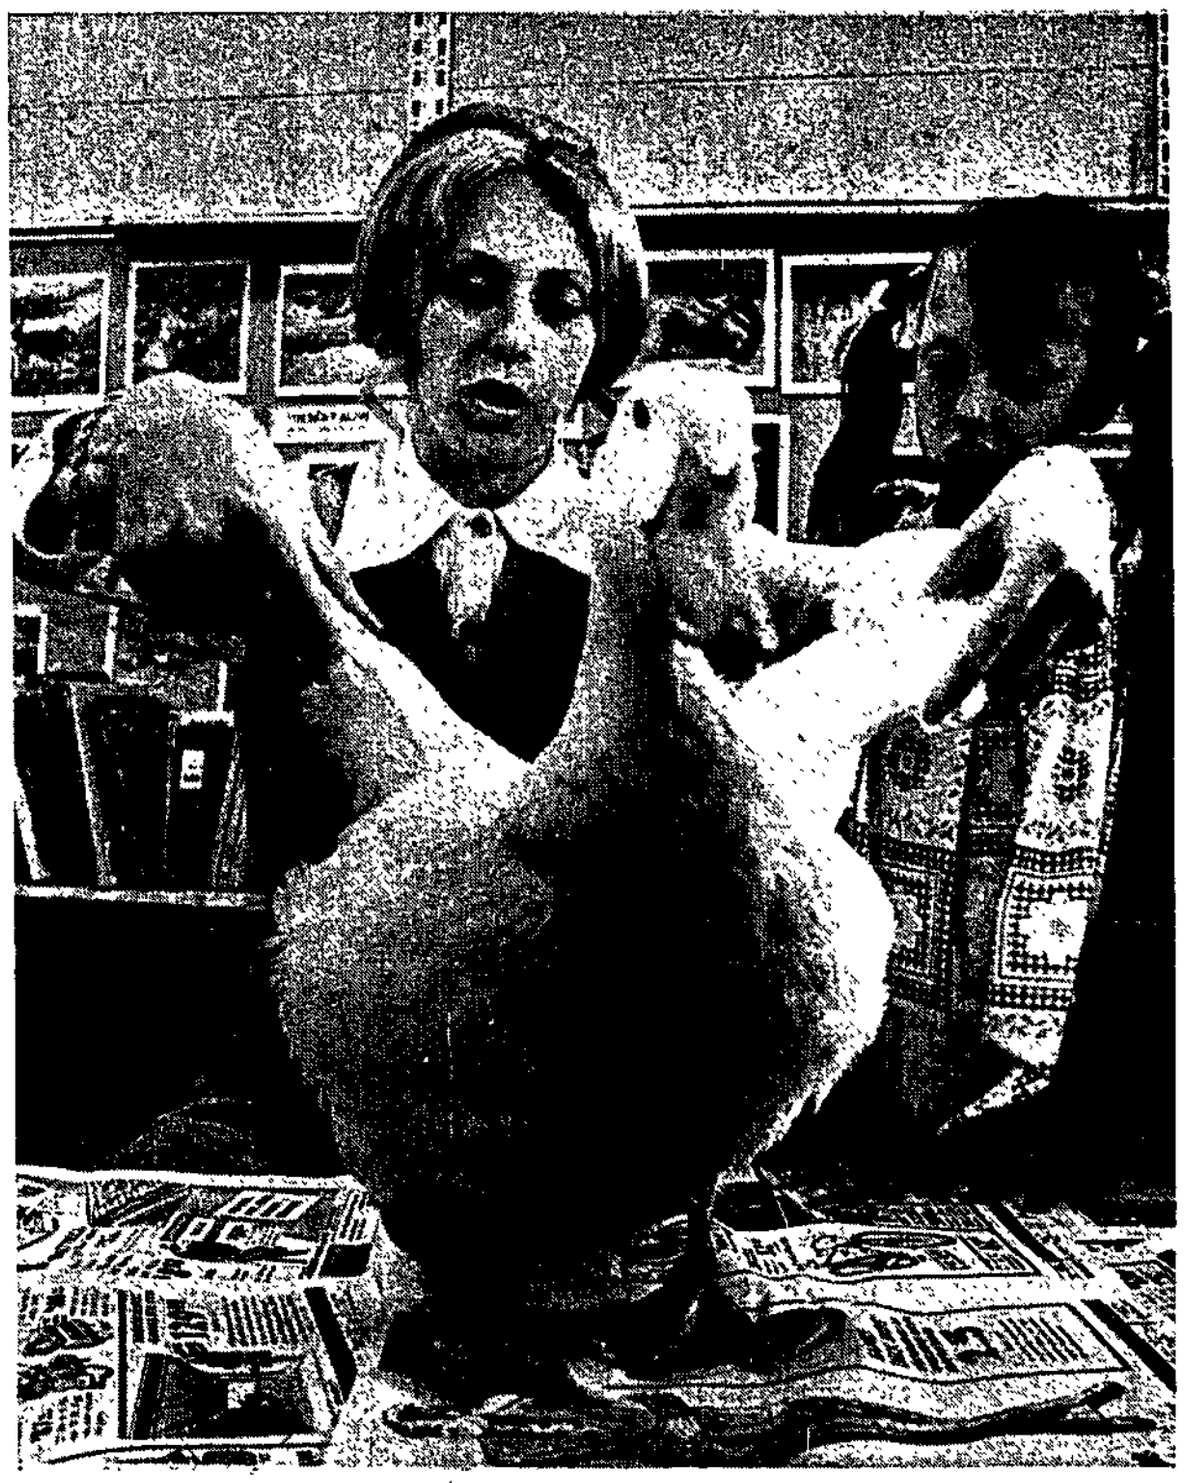
IN STUDYING the bone structure, size and characteristics compared to those of present day animals, the class is offering the grade school children "an excellent form of a science unit on evolution," Miss LaBarbera said.

Although all of the children enrolled are very enthusiastic about their studies of animals, "they are completely fascinated by the real animals that are brought into class and how they act and react to them, she said. "They can't wait to bring in their own pets so we can talk about them."

So, for the next few weeks, an ant farm will be constructed and little notebooks containing crayon drawings and pencilled explanations of animals will continue.

But more important, "a greater appreciation and relation with animals will evolve between these children through their experiences in this class, "Miss LaBarbera says.

And that is not only fun for the children, but a riot for the teacher who has to chauffeur the duck, the dog, the cat, the rooster . . .



EVERYTHING IS JUST "ducky" in the animal talk class at Brentwood School in Des Plaines, where Bonnie LaBarbera teaches Dist. 59 summer school students. This duck is just one of the visitors to the class where children are taught to "talk" to animals and give them proper attention and care.

New Vale Tract plans approved by planners

Revised plans for section 19 of the Vale Tract housing development west of Ill. Rte. 53 and north of Nerge Road were approved by the Elk Grove Village Plan Commission last week.

The plan had been revised previously to include a small retention lake that will be maintained by the Elk Grove Village Park District. The commission voted 4-2 to recommend approval of the plans subject to changes in the names of some of the streets. The name changes were suggested to simplify the street system.

Scheduled discussion on the proposed Devon-53 development was postponed until Thursday. That will be the only topic on the agenda.

The July 19 meeting was cancelled because several commission members will not be able to attend.

GOP asked employes for cash 'gifts'

by BOB LAHEY and KURT BAER

Wheeling Township highway department employes were asked to contribute for membership in the Wheeling Township Republican Organization at a brief meeting at which their paychecks were distributed.

Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen confirmed to the Herald Friday he summoned his highway crew shortly before quitting time a week ago Friday. He said the purpose of the meeting, as in previous such meetings, was "to make announcements."

The announcements at this meeting included a call for volunteers to drive vehicles in the July 4 parade of the Prospect Heights Lions Club, and a request for memberships in the township GOP organization.

Olsen said that "it was maybe imprudent of me" to ask for memberships at the same time he handed out paychecks, but he emphasized that he informed the workers that the contributions were strictly voluntary.

BY THE FOLLOWING Monday, all the five full-time and eight part-time employes of the department had made contributions of $2 for single memberships or $3 for family memberships, Olsen said.

Another full-time employe, who had not yet contributed, was discharged the day following the membership announcement "for insubordination," Olsen said.

The highway commissioner declined to discuss the circumstances of the firing, on the advice of Township Attorney Richard A. Cowen, who also is Republican township committeeman.

The employe told the Herald he was fired following a dispute with Olsen after the employe saw an "unofficial car" leaving the township garage on Saturday evening. The employe, who had worked for the department for about three years, said he followed the car and did not know the driver was Olsen until Olsen parked at his residence.

HE SAID OLSEN told him he had been washing his car at the garage, and when the employe "stated the irregularity of the act," he was fired.

Olsen said he had been testing new car-washing equipment, recently installed, so that he could demonstrate it to department employes on Monday.

The employe made no charge that his discharge was related to the membership solicitation, and Olsen stated emphatically that it was not.

Olsen said he repeated the request for GOP memberships at the highway garage Monday and that all the employes contributed "except one man who said he had forgotten about it and asked if he could bring the money the next day." Olsen said he told the man the membership drive would be over by then, but that he would put the money in and the employe could pay him back later.

At that time, he said, only the fulltime employes were informed of the firing.

Cowen told the Herald it is "absolutely not" the policy to condition "employment, payment or promotions" of township employes on political contributions.

"IN RETROSPECT, (Olsen) was unwise in mentioning membership at a meeting at which paychecks were distributed," said Cowen. "But I'm sure that he is aware that the decision of an employe to participate or not can have absolutely no bearing on his employment."

Lawrence Carrozza, former highway commissioner who is still employed with the department, said in his 13 years with the department there had been no request of employes for contributions to the GOP organization, but he added that he saw nothing wrong in asking for membership dues on a voluntary basis.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she was "very, very surprised" that employes had been asked at work to contribute to the party and said it was "absolutely not" an acceptable recruitment practice.

Two $600 bicycles stolen from shop

Two 10-speed imported French bicycles valued at $600 each were stolen Friday night from Mel Pinto Imports Inc., 2452 American Ln., Elk Grove Village.

The business had only been open four days when the burglary took place.

According to police, the man who reported the burglary, Thomas Srsha, said he saw a man, 25 to 30 years old wearing a white short sleeve shirt and brown and gold slacks take the bikes and place them in his car.

Police said the burglar apparently entered the bicycle plant through a rear door, which had been left with the dead bolt unlocked.

Walker's folly?

with gas shortages, company pressure and expressways, I just don't know. Do I have much invested? Just about $45,000 in loans and notes. I'm just scratching now, I don't know what'll happen."

The countryside through which the interstate would run is a pleasant jumble of truck farms, nurseries, massive estates and new weekend hideways.

The ground rolls gently with slight swells extending from the Wisconsin moraines to the north. The fields are bordered by thick groves of trees. Cardinals and jays dart through the stands of woods.

Gov. Walker put a $294 million price tag on the project. About $72 million of this is planned for land acquisition. The state figured a cost of $1.31 million per mile for acquiring the right-of-way. This comes out to about $37,400 an acre.

A spokesman for the state said the figures were "very, very rough guesstimates." The quality of the land and whether it is developed would affect the final cost, he said.

LONG GROVE stands apart from the usual Northwest suburb. A restored village as a commercial enterprise is reached by means of the blacktops off the highway.

Poised to the south of the village is the improved extension of Rt. 53, the basis for the new interstate.

The manager of the Crossroads store in Long Grove is used to the idea of the concrete march through the town. A new improved Rt. 53 has been in the planning stage for years before Gov. Walker tagged it the alternative to the Crosstown.

"Most people here have resigned themselves to the idea of having this built. The village opposed it. It splits the village in half. But it won't affect the business district much," he said.

But the manager of Ginny's Gift Shop in Long Grove thinks the highway would provide a more direct route to the village.

"People have problems finding the place," she said of the asphalt cut-offs that now lead to town.

Nick Nohl drives a truck for the Elgin Paper Co. and he looks forward to the new road.

"It's really what we need to get us around the city, especially if you're a trucker. These areas are getting built up and the people need a road," he said.

Nohl, although he likes the governor's plans, is not satisfied. "We also need that crosstown road. It's rough driving through the streets downtown."

L. Koch owns 20 acres of farm land outside the village of Hawthorne Woods. He also operates a small produce stand on Old Higgins Road.

"Where the hell are they going to put it, I want to know. They should put it through the new homes. They are the ones who want it. Why should they cut up farm land? What's a person to do if he's got some acres over here and another little plot over there? You tell me. What the hell are they going to do?"

ALTHOUGH KOCH fears for himself and the other farmers in the area, the fields have steadily been giving way to developers for some time.

Marjorie Taylor works in the Ela Township Office, Lake Zurich, which encompasses part of the proposed route.

"The farmers are selling out all around here. They can't afford to farm here anymore on a small scale. Since the government cut back on the subsidies, the farmer is finding it pretty hard. Now they're cutting up the farms for the developers."

The new road would be west of the village, but Mrs. Taylor sees benefits in that. "It'll get the trucks out of town. We don't have room for them any more. They can just roll by us."

Mundelein straddles the path for the highway. The small businessman there looks to the future and likes what he foresees.

Some like Edd Miller are optimistic about the road and its benefits to his gas station.

"IT WOULD HELP this area considerably since there's not much going on. It'd help the area grow," he said.

He can already see growth. A Holiday Inn opened across the road just last month and a new shopping center is going up just down the road.

Miller's father Shirl manages the station for him and he makes no bones about his view of Walker's announcement, "We'd love it."

The northern extension of the anticipated interstate is about 20 miles from Long Grove up to Grayslake and then to the east. And feelings like the road itself, run both ways.

Guilty inspector to cooperate in probe of FHA

A Cook County building inspector convicted of bribery and income tax evasion is expected to cooperate in the continuing investigation into Federal Housing Administration corruption in exchange for suspension of his three-year prison sentence.

John J. Vallo, 60, pleaded guilty Friday to two charges of bribery and two charges of income tax evasion in connection with the Heatherlea and Pepper Tree Farms subdivisions in Palatine Township.

He was charged last April with accepting bribes from William Kennicott, ex-president of Kaufman and Broad Homes of Illinois, builder of the Palatine Township subdivisions. Kennicott was also indicted in the bribery scheme.

Federal District Court Judge William Lynch gave Vallo a three-year suspended sentence provided he cooperates with the government's ongoing investigation of corruption in the FHA and among other public officials. Kennicott's case is still pending, a source close to the investigation said.

VALLO, 6201 W. Wabansia, Chicago, and Kennicott, of Corona Del Mark, California, were originally charged with six counts of using interstate facilities for bribery.

Vallo also was charged with income tax evasion for failing to report income in 1969 and 1970. Friday he pleaded guilty to not reporting $1,250 on his 1969 return and $1,100 on his 1970 return. U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson said the two sums were the amounts Kennicott gave Vallo.

Four of the six bribery charges against Vallo were dismissed.

Eight other persons were indicted along with Vallo and Kennicott, primarily for bribing FHA officials, income tax evasion or making false claims to the FHA. A federal source said the investigation in this area is continuing, and more indictments are expected.

Village likely to continue ban on burning of leaves

Leaf burning may soon become legal in Illinois, but it probably will continue to be banned in Palatine.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said Friday he favors keeping the prohibition on leaf burning.

The village soon will have the authority to lift the ban because of legislation passed by the Illinois General Assembly in its recently completed session and expected to be signed into law by the governor.

The legislation, sponsored by state Rep. Webber Borchers, R-Decatur, and state Sen. Jack E. Walker, R-Lansing, removes from the Illinois Enviornmental Protection Agency authority to regulate leaf burning. The authority, under the bill, would be turned over to individual municipalities.

However, Jones said he saw no reason to change the Palatine leaf burning policy, though he said he would support lifting the ban on burning trees, in order to destroy trees inflicted with Dutch elm disease.

Currently, dead trees are chopped into firewood, a time-consuming procedure.

"I think the people of Palatine have been more than cooperative in not burning leaves," Jones said, "and it's helpful to the environment.

"There isn't any reason for us to burn leaves with the bag program we have. It's just not a modern way to get rid of them any more."

Since the EPA imposed a ban on burning leaves a few years ago, residents have resorted to piling leaves into plastic bags.

Want apartments on vacant land

Owners of a vacant lot in a residential neighborhod near Bothwell and Washington streets in Palatine are seeking permission to build apartments.

Louis and Anna Meier have petitioned the village to rezone the lot, on the west side of Bothwell just south of Washington, to build a three-flat apartment building.

The petition was referred by village trustees to the zoning board of appeals for a public hearing Aug. 9.

Village Hall office set up for president

An office has been set up in Palatine Village Hall for Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones.

Margaret Dionesotes will man the office, in the second-floor board chambers, from 8:30 a.m. to noon Mondays through Fridays. The phone number is 358-8660.

Previous village presidents did not maintain offices in village hall, but Jones indicated he expected to have more correspondence than previous officials.

Mrs. Dionesotes served as secretary to Jones when he was employed in the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 special education program. As part-time secretary, she receives about $60 a week.

Walker's folly?

Gas station operator scoffs at highway proposal

by JOE SWICKARD
and BETTY LEE

Leonard Klaybor doesn't think Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed highway will ever be built. And if it ever is, Klayhor said he won't like it.

"The way I see it Walker is probably a good governor, but with Mayor Daley and the rest of his clowns running things, it won't get done," he said.

Klaybor is the manager of Leonard's Colonial Standard gas station at U.S. Rt. 12 and Quentin Road, just west of the village of Kildeer, a tiny Lake County town near Long Grove.

His service stationis several miles to the west of the proposed Interstate Highway Gov. Walker announced last week as his alternative to the Crosstown Expressway.

Klaybor will not be in the path of the new road, but he will definitely feel the effects. "If they build it, forget it for me. I'm dead," he said.

HIS STATION is just a year old. It is scrubbed, neat and well lighted. Klaybor has the kind of station that is pictured in magazine ads to illustrate the gasoline dealer as a neighborhood businessman.

"I'll just have to go under if they put an expressway here in the area. The only thing keeping me afloat now are those stoplights on the corner. If those cars go by at 80 or 90, I won't stand a chance. And if the road doesn't go by here, it'll drain off a lot of customers. I don't see how I can make it," he said above the highway noise.

"It's always been my dream to have my own station. But the way everything's going I might just as well close up and work for somebody else. It takes four to five years to get on your feet, if everything goes the way it should. But with gas shortages, company pressure and expressways, I just don't know. Do I have much invested? Just about $45,000 in loans and notes. I'm just scratching now, I don't know what'll happen."

The countryside through which the interstate would run is a pleasant jumble of truck farms, nurseries, massive estates and new weekend hideways.

The ground rolls gently, with slight swells extending from the Wisconsin moraines to the north. The fields are bordered by thick groves of trees. Cardinals and jays dart through the stands of woods.

Gov. Walker put a $294 million price tag on the project. About $72 million of this is planned for land acquisition. The state figured a cost of $1.31 million per mile for acquiring the right-of-way. This comes out to about $37,400 an acre.

A spokesman for the state said the figures were "very, very rough guesstimates." The quality of the land and whether it is developed would affect the final cost, he said.

LONG GROVE stands apart from the usual Northwest suburb. A restored village as a commercial enterprise is reached by means of the blacktops off the highway.

Poised to the south of the village is the improved extension of Rt. 53, the basis for the new interstate.

The manager of the Crossroads store in Long Grove is used to the idea of the concrete march through the town. A new improved Rt. 53 has been in the planning stage for years before Gov. Walker tagged it the alternative to the Crosstown.

"Most people here have resigned themselves to the idea of having this built. The village opposed it. It splits the village in half. But it won't affect the business district much," he said.

But the manager of Ginny's Gift Shop in Long Grove thinks the highway would provide a more direct route to the village.

"People have problems finding the place," she said of the asphalt cut-offs that now lead to town.

Craft sessions signup begins

Senior citizens living in the Palatine Township area may sign up for special craft sessions being planned by the township Council for the Aging, through cooperation with the St. Joseph's Home for the Elderly.

Arts and crafts facilities will be opened on Mondays and Thursdays from 2 to 4 p.m. at the home, 80 W. Northwest Hwy., for area residents age 65 and older.

State health requirements must be met by individuals wanting to join the sessions, including a chest x-ray and physical examination. Senior citizens can obtain the physical exam form by phoning St. Joseph's at 358-5700. The form and a questionnaire about activity preferences will be mailed to those who want to participate in the classes.

FREE CHEST x-rays are available on Wednesdays from 11 a.m. to 6:45 p.m. at the Arlington Heights municipal building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd., through the Suburban Cook County Tuberculosis Sanitarium District.

Starting the experimental craft program is the first step taken by the township committee to organize events and activities for area senior citizens. The committee members are hoping to receive revenue sharing money from Palatine Township to conduct an intensive canvass of the township, to find the elderly and ask them what recreational programs they need.

Township officials have not decided what specific agencies will receive the money, but they have set aside approximately $19,000 for the poor and the aged.

Participation in the program will be restricted to people who are "self-sufficient," or able to care for themselves, mentally alert and need no special nursing attention.

VOLUNTEERS WITH abilities in specific crafts are also being sought to teach their skills to people in the program.

If the first phase of the recreational program is successful, it may be expanded to include outings and other group activities. But at the beginning, the group will work primarily on a wide range of crafts, including ceramics, sewing, woodwork, painting and other art projects.

People in the group will work with materials furnished by St. Joseph's. When a project is completed, it may either be left at St. Joseph's to be sold in the November bazaar, or the person who makes the project may pay for just the materials to be used and keep the item.

Busse Woods basin work to start in August

by JEANETTE DE WYZE

Work on the long-awaited Busse Woods flood control basin will begin next month, Gov. Daniel Walker announced Friday.

The basin will be a 589-acre reservoir, capable of swelling to 1,300 acres during times of flooding from Salt Creek. Located in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve in unincorporated Elk Grove Township, the basin will hold 4,210 acres feet of water.

Excavation, relocation and construction costs of the basin are expected to total about $5.5 million which the state will provide now, in anticipation of future reimbursement by the federal government.

Advertising for construction bids will be placed this week and the bias bids will be open 30 days later, the governor's office said.

THE BUSSE WOODS basin is part of a $26.5 million upper Salt Creek Watershed flood control program, which has been proposed since the mid-1960's. The program is designed to relieve flooding in the 33,280-acre flood plain of Salt Creek by up to 90 per cent.

The entire program calls for a series of six flood control structures along the creek, the largest of which is the Busse Woods reservoir.

Last year's heavy rains flooded thousands of homes along the creek, causing approximately $10 million in damage. The flood was the third severe one in the area since 1937.

TALK ABOUT A BIG PIPE. Trustee Bryan Coughlin couldn't believe that the proposed sewer pipe in the W. Colfax Street improvement project would be 72 — 72! — inches wide. "That's taller than I am," he exclaimed. Fellow Trustee Fred Zajonc couldn't resist adding: "It's broader than you are, too."

SPLIT VOTE. The village board has become known for its 4-2 party line votes. So much so, in fact, that when one vote was unanimous, Coughlin commented to opposition party Trustee Clayton Brown: "Clay, how did you and I end up in the same boat?"

Cedar, Hellen flooding woes on agenda today

The Palatine Village Board tonight will discuss efforts to relieve flooding near the Cedar and Hellen street vicinity.

Residents of the area have been appealing to the village board for several months to improve sewers, but residents just south of the intersection have contended that the improvement would worsen flooding in their neighborhood.

Also on tonight's agenda is discussion to annex the Countryside apartment and YMCA property at Northwest Highway and Colfax Street. An agreement drawn up four years ago indicated an annexation election would be held to bring the property into the village if it is not contiguous. The election would be held among residents of the Countryside apartments and of houses along Colfax Street.

Also tonight, Siegmar Olaf Schneider, a local resident, is expected to again ask village trustees to hold a public hearing for ousted Police Chief Robert R. Centner. Schneider was turned down when he made the request last week.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in village hall.

Improvement project succumbs to pressure

Colfax group lost battles, but won war

by MARCIA KRAMER

For three years, the people who live and work on W. Colfax Street in Palatine have fought — in public hearings, meetings and court — the proposed improvements for their street. In each case, they lost.

Now, finally, they've managed to win when it counts — at the village board level. "The "million dollar mile from nowhere to nowhere" has succumbed to public pressure, much to the relief of the Colfax Street property owners.

"None of us wanted what they were planning," said Connie Ramirez, 710 W. Colfax St. She acknowledged that the road needs improvement, but as most other property owners, insisted the planned improvements were excessive — both in need and cost.

THE VILLAGE board agreed and last week voted to scrap the controversial $1.4 million improvement project.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones says he favors improvements on a smaller scale, both in scope and cost. And that appears to be all right with the property owners.

"We were never against some kind of improvement," Robert J. Ulbrich, an owner of F. J. Die, Mold and Stamping Co. Inc., pointed out.

Ulbrich listed some of the main opposition to the now rejected plans:

• Cost. Property owners were to pay 30 per cent of the cost, based on a $50 per frontage foot of property. That meant homeowners were to pay at least $1,300 each and small businesses about $5,000 to $8,000.

• Road width. Colfax Street was to be widened from two to four lanes between Smith Street and Quentin Road. The homeowners said this would be dangerous for youngsters crossing the street. The businessmen said their businesses are specialized and wouldn't be helped by being on a busier street; in fact, in some cases, business would suffer because parking spaces on the street right-of-way would be eliminated.

• Accessibility. The plans contained no provisions for access to the businesses and homes. Property owners want assurances that the new curbs will allow entry to their property.

• Oversized sewer. The storm sewer planned for Colfax was to be large enough to also serve surrounding areas. That in turn aroused residents of downstream Pleasant Hill, who feared their subdivision would become the draining grounds for northwest Palatine.

• Sidewalks. Because of the small business-light industry nature of W. Colfax Street, property owners believe sidewalks are unnecessary on the south side of the street. They agree that sidewalks on the north side would be convenient for residents who walk to the post office.

JONES SAYS the village is willing to talk with the Colfax Street property owners to work out plans acceptable to both the property owners and the village, and he indicated many of the property owners' suggestions are reasonable.

"We need to do the project," he said. "I don't think anybody along here would contest that."

Charles Altman, owner of Colfax Welding and Fabricating, concurred. "There's no sense in fighting it again," he said. "I just want a fair shake, that's all."

Beltline roadway plan Walker's folly?

new road.

"It's really what we need to get us around the city, especially if you're a trucker. These areas are getting built up and the people need a road," he said.

Nohl, although he likes the governor's plans, is not satisfied. "We also need that crosstown road. It's rough driving through the streets downtown."

L. Koch owns 20 acres of farm land outside the village of Hawthorne Woods. He also operates a small produce stand on Old Higgins Road.

"Where the hell are they going to put it, I want to know. They should put it through the new homes. They are the ones who want it. Why should they cut up farm land? What's a person to do if he's got some acres over here and another little plot over there? You tell me. What the hell are they going to do?"

ALTHOUGH KOCH fears for himself and the other farmers in the area, the fields have steadily been giving way to developers for some time.

Marjorie Taylor works in the Ela Township Office, Lake Zurich, which encompasses part of the proposed route.

"The farmers are selling out all around here. They can't afford to farm here anymore on a small scale. Since the government cut back on the subsidies, the farmer is finding it pretty hard. Now they're cutting up the farms for the developers."

The new road would be west of the village, but Mrs. Taylor sees benefits in that. "It'll get the trucks out of town. We don't have room for them any more. They can just roll by us."

Mundelein straddles the path for the highway. The small businessman there looks to the future and likes what he foresees.

Some like Edd Miller are optimistic about the road and its benefits to his gas station.

"IT WOULD HELP this area considerably since there's not much going on. It'd help the area grow," he said.

He can already see growth. A Holiday Inn opened across the road just last month and a new shopping center is going up just down the road.

Miller's father Shirl manages the station for him and he makes no bones about his view of Walker's announcement, "We'd love it."

The northern extension of the anticipated interstate is about 20 miles from Long Grove up to Grayslake and then to the east. And feelings like the road itself, run both ways.

Contributions were 'strictly voluntary'

by BOB LAHEY
and KURT BAER

Wheeling Township highway department employes were asked to contribute for membership in the Wheeling Township Republican Organization at a brief meeting at which their paychecks were distributed.

Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen confirmed to the Herald Friday he summoned his highway crew shortly before quitting time a week ago Friday. He said the purpose of the meeting, as in previous such meetings, was "to make announcements."

The announcements at this meeting included a call for volunteers to drive vehicles in the July 4 parade of the Prospect Heights Lions Club, and a request for memberships in the township GOP organization.

Olsen said that "it was maybe imprudent of me" to ask for memberships at the same time he handed out paychecks, but he emphasized that he informed the workers that the contributions were strictly voluntary.

BY THE FOLLOWING Monday, all the five full-time and eight part-time employes of the department had made contributions of $2 for single memberships or $3 for family memberships, Olsen said.

Another full-time employe, who had not yet contributed, was discharged the day following the membership announcement "for insubordination," Olsen said.

The highway commissioner declined to discuss the circumstances of the firing, on the advice of Township Attorney Richard A. Cowen, who also is Republican township committeeman.

The employe told the Herald he was fired following a dispute with Olsen after the employe saw an "unofficial car" leaving the township garage on Saturday evening. The employe, who had worked for the department for about three years, said he followed the car and did not know the driver was Olsen until Olsen parked at his residence.

HE SAID OLSEN told him he had been washing his car at the garage, and when the employe "stated the irregularity of the act," he was fired.

Olsen said he had been testing new car-washing equipment, recently installed, so that he could demonstrate it to department employes on Monday.

The employe made no charge that his discharge was related to the membership solicitation, and Olsen stated emphatically that it was not.

Olsen said he repeated the request for GOP memberships at the highway garage Monday and that all the employes contributed "except one man who said he had forgotten about it and asked if he could bring the money the next day." Olsen said he told the man the membership drive would be over by then, but that he would put the money in and the employe could pay him back later.

At that time, he said, only the fulltime employes were informed of the firing.

Cowen told the Herald it is "absolutely not" the policy to condition "employment, payment or promotions" of township employes on political contributions.

"IN RETROSPECT, (Olsen) was unwise in mentioning membership at a meeting at which paychecks were distributed," said Cowen. "But I'm sure that he is aware that the decision of an employe to participate or not can have absolutely no bearing on his employment."

Lawrence Carrozza, former highway commissioner who is still employed with the department, said in his 13 years with the department there had been no request of employes for contributions to the GOP organization, but he added that he saw nothing wrong in asking for membership dues on a voluntary basis.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she was "very, very surprised" that employes had been asked at work to contribute to the party and said it was "absolutely not" an acceptable recruitment practice.

General Time Co. strike ended after 9 months

by TONI GINNETTI

The longest industrial strike in the Northwest suburbs in recent years ended late Thursday when striking employes of the General Time Co. in Rolling Meadows voted to accept a new three-year contract.

Some 100 production employes voted to accept the three-year package that calls for wage increases, fringe benefits, and protective contract assurances for a closed union shop, according to John Carriglio of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Union Local 713.

The agreement marks the end of a 40-week strike that began Oct. 2 when workers walked off the job to protest the company's refusal to a 7 per cent hourly wage increase.

The contract is the first to be negotiated for the company workers by the IBEW. Workers voted to join the union in May, 1972.

Carriglio said the strike was settled after meetings with the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service in Chicago. Federal mediators had been involved in the strike in an on-again, off-again pattern.

Spokesmen for the mediation service said in December talks broke down when the company changed its stand on allowing a closed union shop, which would require all workers at the company to belong to the IBEW. Mediators resumed a role in the bargaining in January.

SEVERAL TIMES during the strike the company began back-to-work movements in attempts to end the strike. Both times job advertisements said a strike was in progress at the plant.

In March, the union filed unfair labor practices charges against the company. The charges, which union and company spokesmen declined to describe, were filed with the National Labor Relations Board. The union won the NLRB's support on two of the charges, a union spokesman said.

The ruling on the charges also ordered that the company had to resume bargaining in good faith, according to a union spokesman.

The company, at 1200 S. Hicks, had no comment on the settlement of the strike Friday.

Union officials expressed pleasure with the ending of the nine-month strike.

"I could say we could have done things differently, but as far as I'm concerned, we probably would have done everything the same," Carriglio said.

More than 100 employes had been affected by the strike, but many had left the company to find new jobs during the strike. Carriglio said former employes would be entitled to return to the company for employment if job openings are available but he added "very few people have been coming back."

NO INCIDENTS of trouble at the plant had been reported to police during the months of the strike. Picket lines had been absent from the company for the last several months but signs advising that a strike was in progress were posted outside the entrance driveway to the company.

While company officials persistently refused to comment on any aspect of the strike, it was believed that production at the plant, which manufactures electronic equipment, was not severely hampered during the strike.

The company issued only one public statement during the strike, that coming in mid-December when the company repeated its stand against a closed union shop.

General Time is a subsidiary of Talley Industries.

Leonard Klaybor doesn't think Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed highway will ever be built. And if it ever is, Klaybor said he won't like it.

"The way I see it Walker is probably a good governor, but with Mayor Daley and the rest of his clowns running things, it won't get done," he said.

Klaybor is the manager of Leonard's Colonial Standard gas station at U.S. Rt. 12 and Quentin Road, just west of the village of Kildeer, a tiny Lake County town near Long Grove.

His service stationis several miles to the west of the proposed Interstate Highway Gov. Walker announced last week as his alternative to the Crosstown Expressway.

Klaybor will not be in the path of the new road, but he will definitely feel the effects. "If they build it, forget it for me. I'm dead," he said.

HIS STATION is just a year old. It is scrubbed, neat and well lighted. Klaybor has the kind of station that is pictured in magazine ads to illustrate the gasoline dealer as a neighborhood businessman.

"I'll just have to go under if they put an expressway here in the area. The only thing keeping me afloat now are those stoplights on the corner. If those cars go by at 80 or 90, I won't stand a chance. And if the road doesn't go by here, it'll drain off a lot of customers. I don't see how I can make it," he said above the highway noise.

"It's always been my dream to have my own station. But the way everything's going I might just as well close up and work for somebody else. It takes four to five years to get on your feet, if everything goes the way it should. But with gas shortages, company pressure and expressways, I just don't know. Do I have much invested? Just about $45,000 in loans and notes. I'm just scratching now, I don't know what'll happen."

The countryside through which the interstate would run is a pleasant jumble of truck farms, nurseries, massive estates and new weekend hideways.

THE RUSTIC covered bridge will soon stand beside Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed "Crosstown Alternative."

The ground rolls gently with slight swells extending from the Wisconsin moraines to the north. The fields are bordered by thick groves of trees. Cardinals and jays dart through the stands of woods.

Gov. Walker put a $294 million price tag on the project. About $72 million of this is planned for land acquisition. The state figured a cost of $1.31 million per mile for acquiring the right-of-way. This comes out to about $37,400 an acre.

A spokesman for the state said the figures were "very, very rough guesstimates." The quality of the land and whether it is developed would affect the final cost, he said.

LONG GROVE stands apart from the usual Northwest suburb. A restored village as a commercial enterprise is reached by means of the blacktops off the highway.

Poised to the south of the village is the improved extension of Rt. 53, the basis for the new interstate.

The manager of the Crossroads store in Long Grove is used to the idea of the concrete march through the town. A new improved Rt. 53 has been in the planning stage for years before Gov. Walker tagged it the alternative to the Crosstown.

"Most people here have resigned themselves to the idea of having this built. The village opposed it. It splits the village in half. But it won't affect the business district much," he said.

But the manager of Ginny's Gift Shop in Long Grove thinks the highway would provide a more direct route to the village.

"People have problems finding the place," she said of the asphalt cut-offs that now lead to town.

Carnival license refund backed

A begrudging committee recommendation will be made Tuesday to the Rolling Meadows City Council to refund to the city's Jaycees the cost of license fees for a carnival held two weeks ago.

The recommendation will be made by the council's license, police, health, and fire committee, which voted Thursday to make the move after debating the matter for more than a half hour in a closed session.

The controversy surrounding the refund of approximately $700 in fees erupted during a council meeting two weeks ago when aldermen argued and then tabled a resolution that would have refunded the sum to the Jaycees.

Ald. Thomas Scanlan (1st), chairman of the committee, was the most vocal of the committee's five members Thursday in opposing the refund.

SCANLAN SAID the council would be setting discriminatory precedents by granting the refunds to the Jaycees. He said that though the Jaycees claim to be a nonprofit organization, businesses holding carnivals could also claim such ventures were for nonprofit causes.

"Where do we draw the line?" Scanlan said angrily.

Past policy in the city has permitted city clubs and organizations the right to request a waiver of fees for fundraising events. The requests in the past have usually been approved by the city council.

The Jaycees were given approval Thursday to request a refund from the council because of a "technicality," Scanlan said after the closed session. The technicality occurred because the Jaycees' permit to run the carnival had been issued before passage of a new business license ordinance requiring the fees.

THE CARNIVAL was held two weeks ago to raise money for the Jaycees-sponsored fireworks display for the city's Fourth of July celebration last week.

Michael Buschbacher, president of the Jaycees, was present at the meeting Thursday to request approval of another carnival to be held July 26 through July 29. Scanlan told him the committee would no longer grant waiving of fees to any organization, but that the council could consider refunding fees after an event is held.

He warned Buschbacher, however, that a recommendation to refund fees would have to come from the committee, "which will be very difficult to get from here on," Scanlan said.

new road.

"It's really what we need to get us around the city, especially if you're a trucker. These areas are getting built up and the people need a road," he said.

Nohl, although he likes the governor's plans, is not satisfied. "We also need that crosstown road. It's rough driving through the streets downtown."

L. Koch owns 20 acres of farm land outside the village of Hawthorne Woods. He also operates a small produce stand on Old Higgins Road.

"Where the hell are they going to put it, I want to know. They should put it through the new homes. They are the ones who want it. Why should they cut up farm land? What's a person to do if he's got some acres over here and another little plot over there? You tell me. What the hell are they going to do?"

ALTHOUGH KOCH fears for himself and the other farmers in the area, the fields have steadily been giving way to developers for some time.

Marjorie Taylor works in the Ela Township Office, Lake Zurich, which encompasses part of the proposed route.

"The farmers are selling out all around here. They can't afford to farm here anymore on a small scale. Since the government cut back on the subsidies, the farmer is finding it pretty hard. Now they're cutting up the farms for the developers."

The new road would be west of the village, but Mrs. Taylor sees benefits in that. "It'll get the trucks out of town. We don't have room for them any more. They can just roll by us."

Mundelein straddles the path for the highway. The small businessman there looks to the future and likes what he foresees.

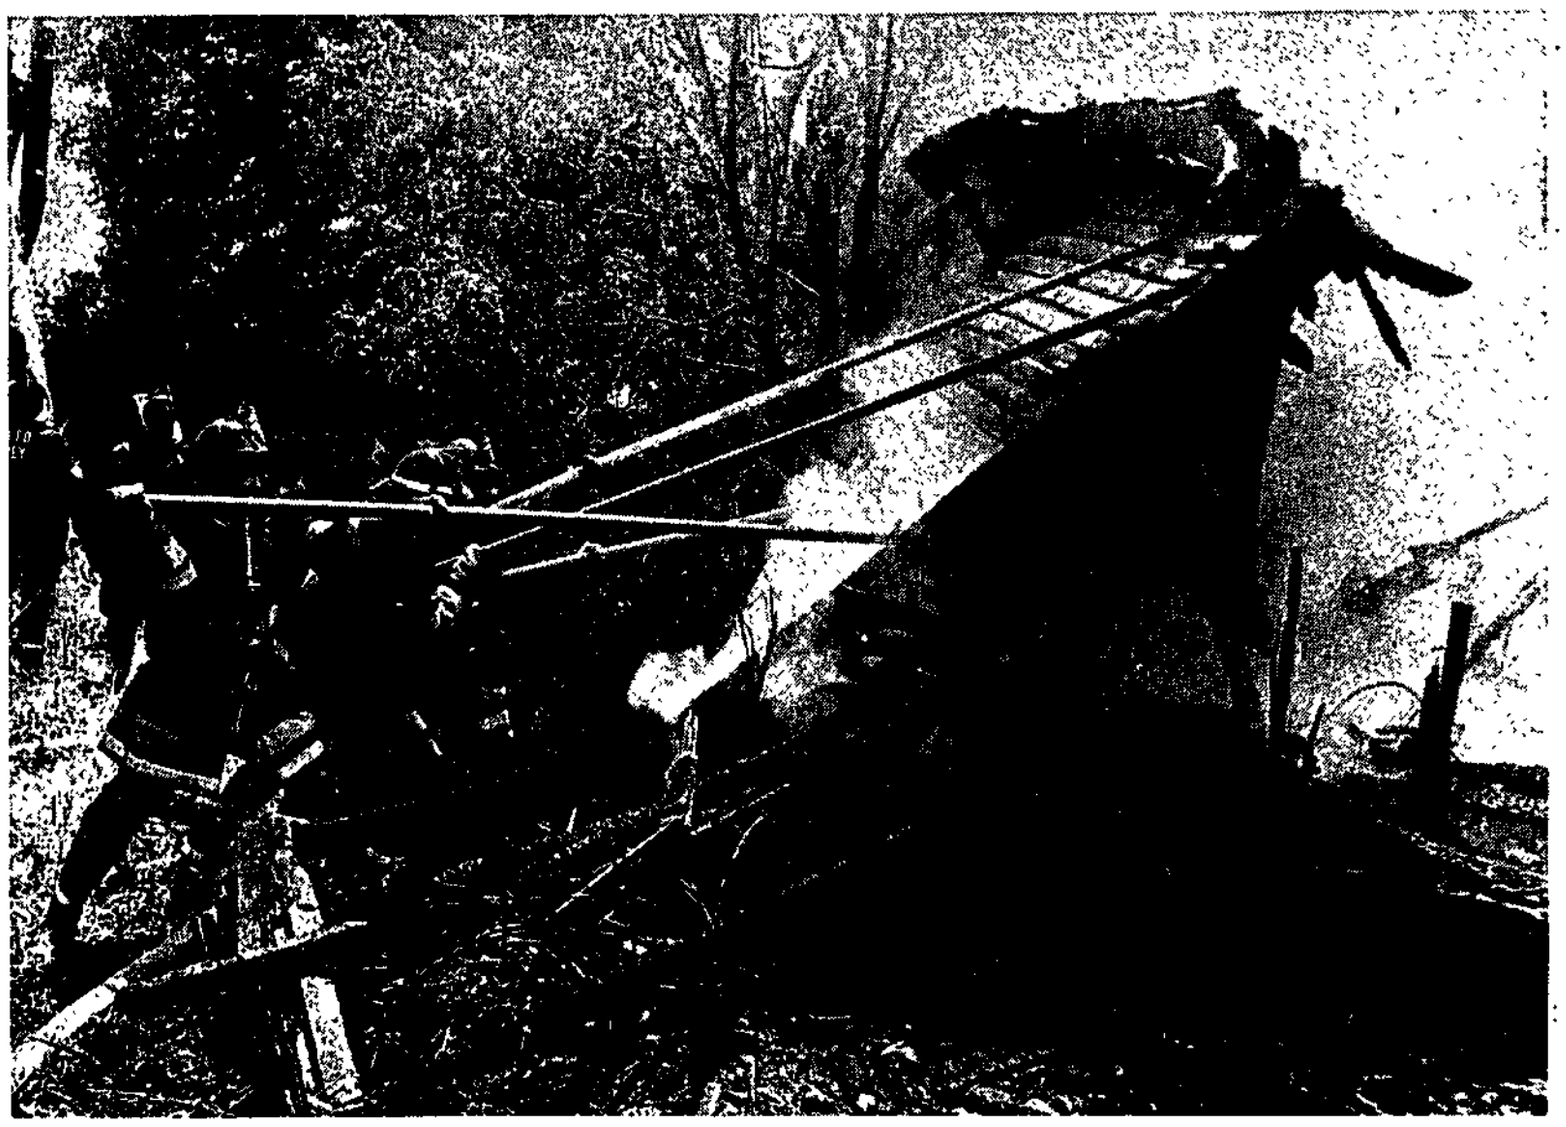
Some like Edd Miller are optimistic about the road and its benefits to his gas station.

"IT WOULD HELP this area considerably since there's not much going on. It'd help the area grow," he said.

He can already see growth. A Holiday Inn opened across the road just last month and a new shopping center is going up just down the road.

Miller's father Shirl manages the station for him and he makes no bones about his view of Walker's announcement, "We'd love it."

The northern extension of the anticipated interstate is about 20 miles from Long Grove up to Grayslake and then to the east. And feelings like the road itself, run both ways.



THE REMAINS OF an abandoned one-story frame-house are cleared away by firemen Friday after fire destroyed the building, located on the south side of Golf Road near Algonquin Road in Rolling Meadows. Firemen from Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, and Arlington Heights controlled the fire, which burned about 15 minutes. Fire officials said the fire probably was started by juvenile mischief.

Busse Woods basin work to start in August

by JEANETTE DE WYZE

Work on the long-awaited Busse Woods flood control basin will begin next month, Gov. Daniel Walker announced Friday.

The basin will be a 589-acre reservoir, capable of swelling to 1,300 acres during times of flooding from Salt Creek. Located in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve in unincorporated Elk Grove Township, the basin will hold 4,210 acres feet of water.

Excavation, relocation and construction costs of the basin are expected to total about $5.5 million which the state will provide now, in anticipation of future reimbursement by the federal government.

Advertising for construction bids will be placed this week and the bias bids will be open 30 days later, the governor's office said.

THE BUSSE WOODS basin is part of a $26.5 million upper Salt Creek Watershed flood control program, which has been proposed since the mid-1960's. The program is designed to relieve flooding in the 33,280-acre flood plain of Salt Creek by up to 90 per cent.

The entire program calls for a series of six flood control structures along the creek, the largest of which is the Busse Woods reservoir.

Last year's heavy rains flooded thousands of homes along the creek, causing approximately $10 million in damage. The flood was the third severe one in the area since 1957.

Half a million

Future of America Fair—area's biggest event ever?

The Future of America Fair, to be held at Arlington Park Race Track Aug. 24 to Sept. 3 looms as the biggest event ever to hit the Northwest suburbs.

An exposition of state fair proportions, the Future of America Fair is expected to attract a half million persons to the race track grounds.

Vernon G. Wendland, executive vice president of Future of America Fairs, Inc., is the man responsible for making the fair go. The former director of the highly-successful Wisconsin State Fair, Wendland says the exposition at Arlington Park is a "pilot fair" that hopefully will serve as a base for an annual production.

"RACE TRACKS are not built for a fair per se and we've had to be great innovators in our thinking about what goes into a fair in order to build a concept that will be accepted by the people.

"It's the people's fair really, the people of Arlington Heights, Rolling Meadows, Palatine, all of Chicagoland. We're trying to produce the kind of family-oriented thing they will want to come and see," he said.

Wendland's formula for success includes a variety of exhibits, a midway with 60-70 major rides and a "kiddieland," over $300,000 worth of big name entertainers and even a 12-act circus with high-wire acts, big cats and a human cannonball.

THE FUTURE OF America Fair is designed to mean something to residents living in a metropolitan area. Unlike the Illinois State Fair in Springfield which is strongly oriented toward agriculture, the Future of America Fair will set out exhibits on recreational vehicles, aerospace and the street of tommorrow.

The livestock and agriculture exhibits that are included will be educational rather than the traditional "best of breed" judging contests.

"I don't think many people go to Springfield (for the state fair) from Chicago. It's a long, hot ride and the agricultural aspects don't really interest them," Wendland said.

THE ILLINOIS FAIR normally draws about 900,000 people. The Wisconsin State Fair in Milwaukee which runs at the same time as the Illinois State Fair (this year Aug. 10-19) attracts a million visitors each year.

"When I managed the Wisconsin fair (from 1966-71) we figured that 40 per cent of our attendance came from northern Illinois. Now we're out to get that same 40 per cent to come to Arlington."

Promotion for the Future of America Fair will reach territory within 150 miles of Arlington Park through newspapers, radio, television and billboards.

"We've reserved 300 billboards around Chicago and 30 in Milwaukee," Wendland said.

Planning for the Future of America Fair dates to 1970, when officials from Madison Square Garden, which owns Arlington Park, first approached Wendland to discuss the idea of introducing a new kind of fair.

"They thought Arlington might be an ideal spot for a pilot fair. Also under consideration was Roosevelt Raceway on Long Island, N. Y.," he said.

WENDLAND HAS been tied into the fair business virtually all his working life, starting as a part-time grounds keeper. He has worked as a security guard, chief of security, business manager and ultimately became the director of the Wisconsin fair which he says is ranked one of the 10 best in North America.

"As a high school junior in 1937, I lived next to the fair grounds in Milwaukee and worked part-time on the grounds. Part-time jobs were hard to come by then, so I just kept working."

In 1968, two years after he assumed directorship of the Wisconsin fair, it set an all-time attendance record of 1,032,000 people.

"We're not trying to compete with the state fairs. In fact, I'm in contact all the time with the directors of both the Wisconsin and Illinois fairs to see that we don't duplicate entertainment. It's a highly competitive business, but it has to remain friendly and cooperative at the managerial level."

IN FUTURE YEARS Wendland says he hopes to expand the Future of America Fair and perhaps introduce "a huge parade" which could run from Mount Prospect to Arlington Park.

He talks of bringing in the Schlitz and Budweiser beer wagon teams, marching bands and military units.

"You have to start at the bottom and build acceptance, though," he says.

To many, the Future of America Fair, which includes nightly entertainment by stars like Glen Campbell, Johnny Cash, the Osmond's, Bob Hope and Joey Heatherton, will not sound much like "the bottom." And indeed it is not.

But that's the thing about fairs and the men who dream and plan them. there's always a better show, a more interesting exhibit, a more exciting act to produce next year.

"We're going to survey people at the fair to find out where they came from, how much money they spent, what they liked or didn't like. Hopefully, half a million people will attend," Wendland said.

ADMISSION TO THE grounds is $3 which includes a grandstand show at 8 p.m. each day of the fair. Advance tickets, which are available through the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce are priced at $2.25 each.

Children aged 6 to 11 can get into the fair for $1 and children under 6 will be admitted free.

The Future of America Fair has been designated an international trade fair by the U. S. Dept. of Commerce, paving the way for importers and foreign exhibitors to add their displays to the event.

Each day of he fair will carry a different theme. Opening Day, Aug. 24, is named "Salute America." Saturday the 25th is "Community Service to America," aimed at recognizing area civic groups. Sunday the 26th is "America the Melting Pot" and Monday the 27th is "Kids Day, U.S.A." Special programming for kids is planned and those 11 and under will be admitted free until 6 p.m.

Tuesday the 28th is "America's Fair Lady Day" and Wednesday is "American Heritage Day" for senior citizens. Thursday the 30th is "Sportsmen of America Day" and Friday is "Young America Day."

September 1st is directed to agricultural business and has been named "America, the Land of Milk and Honey." Sunday is titled "America the Beautiful" and Monday, Sept. 3, Labor Day, will be "Family Day, the America Way."

Contributions were 'strictly voluntary'

by BOB LAHEY
and KURT BAER

Wheeling Township highway department employes were asked to contribute for membership in the Wheeling Township Republican Organization at a brief meeting at which their paychecks were distributed.

Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen confirmed to the Herald Friday he summoned his highway crew shortly before quitting time a week ago Friday. He said the purpose of the meeting, as in previous such meetings, was "to make announcements."

The announcements at this meeting included a call for volunteers to drive vehicles in the July 4 parade of the Prospect Heights Lions Club, and a request for memberships in the township GOP organization.

Olsen said that "it was maybe imprudent of me" to ask for memberships at the same time he handed out paychecks, but he emphasized that he informed the workers that the contributions were strictly voluntary.

BY THE FOLLOWING Monday, all the five full-time and eight part-time employes of the department had made contributions of $2 for single memberships or $3 for family memberships, Olsen said.

Another full-time employe, who had not yet contributed, was discharged the day following the membership announcement "for insubordination," Olsen said.

The highway commissioner declined to discuss the circumstances of the firing, on the advice of Township Attorney Richard A. Cowen, who also is Republican township committeeman.

The employe told the Herald he was fired following a dispute with Olsen after the employe saw an "unofficial car" leaving the township garage on Saturday evening. The employe, who had worked for the department for about three years, said he followed the car and did not know the driver was Olsen until Olsen parked at his residence.

HE SAID OLSEN told him he had been washing his car at the garage, and when the employe "stated the irregularity of the act," he was fired.

Olsen said he had been testing new car-washing equipment, recently installed, so that he could demonstrate it to department employes on Monday

The employe made no charge that his discharge was related to the membership solicitation, and Olsen stated emphatically that it was not.

Olsen said he repeated the request for GOP memberships at the highway garage Monday and that all the employes contributed "except one man who said he had forgotten about it and asked if he could bring the money the next day." Olsen said he told the man the membership drive would be over by then, but that he would put the money in and the employe could pay him back later.

At that time, he said, only the fulltime employes were informed of the firing.

Cowen told the Herald it is "absolutely not" the policy to condition "employment, payment or promotions" of township employes on political contributions.

"IN RETROSPECT, (Olsen) was unwise in mentioning membership at a meeting at which paychecks were distributed," said Cowen. "But I'm sure that he is aware that the decision of an employe to participate or not can have absolutely no bearing on his employment."

Lawrence Carrozza, former highway commissioner who is still employed with the department, said in his 13 years with the department there had been no request of employes for contributions to the GOP organization, but he added that he saw nothing wrong in asking for membership dues on a voluntary basis.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she was "very, very surprised" that employes had been asked at work to contribute to the party and said it was "absolutely not" an acceptable recruitment practice.

New law abolishes proprietorship tax

Under a new state revenue law, proprietorships, or individually owned businesses, will not be required to pay personal property taxes, the Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce advises.

The new law abolishes personal property taxes on individuals and proprietorships, but in order for proprietorships to be removed from the personal property tax list, they will be required to contact the township assessor's office, according to the Chamber.

Proprietorships in Palatine Township must contact Bernard Peterson, and in Elk Grove Township Charles Hodlmair. In order to prove individual ownership of a business, persons will be required to show copies of income tax returns, the Chamber advises.

Salt Creek Watershed flood-control program

by JEANETTE DE WYZE

Work on the long-awaited Busse Woods flood control basin will begin next month, Gov. Daniel Walker announced Friday.

The basin will be a 569-acre reservoir, capable of swelling to 1,300 acres during times of flooding from Salt Creek. Located in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve in unincorporated Elk Grove Township, the basin will hold 4,210 acres feet of water.

Excavation, relocation and construction costs of the basin are expected to total about $5.5 million which the state will provide now, in anticipation of future reimbursement by the federal government.

Advertising for construction bids will be placed this week and the bias bids will be open 30 days later, the governor's office said.

THE BUSSE WOODS basin is part of a $26.5 million upper Salt Creek Watershed flood control program, which has been proposed since the mid-1960's. The program is designed to relieve flooding in the 33,280-acre flood plain of Salt Creek by up to 90 per cent.

The entire program calls for a series of six flood control structures along the creek, the largest of which is the Busse Woods reservoir.

Last year's heavy rains flooded thousands of homes along the creek, causing approximately $10 million in damage. The flood was the third severe one in the area since 1957.

Work on the new basin will be done in three phases, the governor's office said.

First, land which the reservoir will fill will be cleared and excavated for pools where the plan calls for deeper water than the natural topography would allow.

Then utility lines now crossing the reservoir site will be relocated. Private land which eventually will be part of the reservoir will also be purchased, although the main part of the reservoir is owned by the forest preserve district. This phase, scheduled to begin in the fall, will be completed by the time phase three begins.

PHASE THREE, scheduled to begin next summer, consists of constructing one main embankment and two lateral dams across Salt Creek and relocating a trailer park in the forest preserve away from the reservoir site.

Funds for the relocation of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Trailer Park, which houses about 700 persons, are included in the $5.5 million cost figure. However, although the park is definitely scheduled to be moved, Mark Clark, of the governor's office said the state does not yet know where the park will be moved.

Spokesmen from the Cook County Forest Preserve and the Illinois Department of Transportation, which sometimes assists with relocations, said they also have no idea where the trailer park will be relocated.

FRED LUNNSMANN, manager of the park, said Friday that he had not been notified of the relocation plans.

"Nobody's even approached the owners or anything. As far as we're concerned, we're in the dark," he said.

Lunnsmann said there is little concern among park residents about the basin, because they still don't believe they will be relocated.

"There's been talk of this for 10 or 11 years now, and they don't believe we're going to be moved," he said.

In addition to the construction costs for the site, the state is advancing half the cost of improving surrounding recreation facilities, up to a total share of $1.2 million. All the recreation improvement expenditure by the state is expected to be repaid by the federal government.

Recreation facilities will include bike paths, nature trails, fishing walls, boat docks and launch ramps, and a winter hill for skiing, tobagganing and sledding. The hill will be built with earth excavated from the reservoir site.

IN ANNOUNCING the plans, Gov. Walker said, "The people whose lives and homes are potentially threatened by flooding of Salt Creek have watched agency upon agency draw plans to provide flood control. But for one reason after another, nothing was done.

"This project has epitomized the grand-plans-but-no-action syndrome of bureaucracy tied up in red tape.

"Waiting for federal approval before proceeding would delay flood control at least another three years and possibly as many as ten."

The state has not yet received a license to begin work on the site from the Cook County Forest Preserve. James Tyndall, assistant general superintendent of the forest preserve, said that such a license will only be granted if the state's construction plans meet with approval from the local Soil Conservation Service.

Tyndall said that such approval is expected in the near future.

Hot-lunch program plans back to the drawing board

A plan for a hot-lunch program in Schaumburg Township schools is back on the drawing boards this week, to be rewritten and expanded with several alternatives by July 23.

Dist. 54 officials told management to prepare a more comprehensive trial program after extended discussion Thursday. The board will meet in committee at 8 p.m. July 23 at Helen Keller Junior High School, 820 W. Bode Rd., Hoffman Estates.

The suggestion for plan revisions came from board member Gordon Thoren, who said he would vote for the existing plan, but felt the board was too deeply split for a matter of such importance.

The measure likely would have passed by one vote, if a vote had been taken Thursday night, as was anticipated.

THE PLAN, as presented to the board Thursday, was for Armstrong, McArthur, Fox and Link elementary schools, and would have allowed a 30-minute lunch period for each child.

The children would have had the option of bringing sack lunches from home, buying 47-cent hot lunches similar to those now provided at junior high schools or walking home for lunch within the 30-minute period.

All existing lunch programs, each of which now provides a full hour for the meal, were to be canceled under the new proposal. Within the district there are schools in which all children go home, children may take part in parent-paid programs, lunch programs established only for winter months and district sponsored programs for children who ride buses.

Donnie Rudd, board president, yesterday said he would have favored the program, if it had come to a vote. Although he felt concerns about basic issues in the proposal, it appeared district residents were strongly in favor of it, he said.

Rudd referred to a survey taken at Armstrong, McArthur and Fox schools, in which 718 responding parents favored a hot-lunch program, 107 did not and 84 were undecided. But he noted several trustees questioned the reliability of the questionnaire, since it was not distributed district wide.

A new questionnaire is to be developed at a July 12 meeting of the board's community relations committee, along with a method for obtaining a random sampling of opinion throughout the district.

RUDD SAID he was concerned about the estimated 10 per cent minority of parents who want their children to walk home from lunch but will find that impossible with the 30-minute limit.

He also was concerned about the use of dollars intended for education to finance a lunch program, and about management's justification for the program on the basis of an alleged discipline problem. Rudd said he and other board members felt any discipline problem should be handled separately, and not used to justify the lunch proposal.

Estimated cost of using the program throughout the four schools was $29,000. Administrators estimate about $120,000 would be needed to sponsor a program throughout the district.

Unit district study lags

The study into the feasibility of forming a unit school district in Schaumburg has lagged behind schedule, according to Jim Blankenship, vice chairman of the citizens' group initiating the study.

A progress report was due about June 1, according to the contract between the Schaumburg Committee for Unit District and Ralph A. Beinap, a Northern Illinois University education professor conducting the study.

The first progress report will hopefully be ready by the second week in August, Blankenship said Friday.

Beinap is to be paid $1,500 of the $5,500 contract when the first report is submitted. Blankenship said, to his knowledge, no money has been paid out.

Asked if the delay would mean the study would not be completed by October as planned, Blankenship said, "I think they'll make it by October."

The committee does not want to rush the consultants, he said. The October deadline was Beinap's date, he added, not the committee's.

MEETINGS OF the unification committee were discontinued in last March with the signing of the consultant's contract. They will resume when the progress report is ready for presentation, Blankenship said. "As far as were concerned, our job, to find a consultant to make recommendations on the unit district, is done," he added.

The second progress report was originally scheduled for September, with another payment of $1,500. The final installment of $2,500 is to be paid in November.

The study will determine the educational advantages of forming a unit district in Schaumburg Township. Presently there is an elementary school district and a high school district in the township. The study will be funded primarily through a $5,000 donation from the Schaumburg United Party.

Blankenship said most of the raw data for the study has been compiled, but the consultants have not yet evaluated it.

Whose woods are these?

by STEVE BROWN

In the midst of the Watergate scandal, rising food prices and diminishing fuel supplies, a local, less serious, but equally perplexing problem has cropped up again.

It seems that the topic of Sarah's Grove has been brought up for discussion. Schaumburg area neophytes may wonder just what this grove is and more importantly why it would cause problems, but anyone who has been around for awhile knows the grove has much significance, and has been the subject of much controversy.

Steve Brown

Sarah's Grove is commonly known as a collection of mature trees along the north side of Schaumburg Road on the site of the Schaumburg branch of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

It is believed the area was one first settled within the township and therefore has some historical importance.

THE CONTROVERSY began to brew when a planned unit development and the hospital were proposed. Some feared the developers would destroy the trees. With big trees in the corn field — cum — megalopolis harder to find than the owner of a Chicago slum, some argued the trees could be saved.

The developers and the hospital have assured everyone the trees could be saved, but an interesting note evolved from the discussion.

In the midst of the argument, no less than Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher decreed that Sarah's Grove was not in Schaumburg township. He quoted an 1870 history of Bloomingdale Township which indicated that Sarah's Grove was there and not here. Therefore, the area has no historical importance.

Fine, but apparently that was not the end of it. In last week's mail came a note from none other than Ray LeBeau, Schaumburg village trustee. LeBeau has worn a variety of hats for the village recently, including public relations director. He is now the head of the village's bi-centennial commiteee. His note sought to announce a meeting for the village's 1976 project.

IT CAN BE assumed that LeBeau would be knowledgeable about the village's history and certainly know the score on Sarah's Grove.

But from his pen comes these words: "Schaumburg can be proud of its heritage that can trace its early beginnings as Sarah's Grove one hundred and thirty or so years ago."

Could it be that Sarah's Grove is in Schaumburg Township? The question is becoming harder and harder to answer. It also is becoming harder to keep straight.

Could it be that Schaumburg only accepts Sarah's Grove when it becomes convenient or non-controversial?

Whatever the case might be, we try to keep things straight, but an occasional switcheroo, like Sarah's Grove, makes that job just a little harder.

Insurance benefits rise for area schoolchildren

Benefits were significantly increased in five areas of the 12-month insurance coverage parents may purchase for children of Schaumburg Township schools for the coming year.

The board of education has contracted with United Insurance Co. of America for its 1973-74 insurance program, with a slight increase in premium costs over the Puritan Life program available last year. Parents are not required to purchase the insurance.

For school time coverage only, the premium is $3, the same as last year. But for 24-hour, 12-month coverage, the premium has increased from $15 last year to $18 for the coming year. The premium is paid once for the entire year.

Improvements in the coverage appear in hospital bed rate provisions, allowances for dental bills from tooth injuries, accidental death benefits, X-ray charges and private tutoring benefits.

THE NEW PROGRAM provides full cost of semi private or private rooms or intensive care beds. Last year's plan had a $40 per day limit.

Children with tooth injuries are covered for up to $150 per tooth, compared with the old plan's benefit of $150 per accident.

The new plan provides accidental death benefits of $10,000 plus medical costs, while the old plan allowed either the $10,000 or the medical costs, but not both.

The full cost of X-rays done in or out of the hospital will be paid under the coming year's policies, while last year's provided for a limited number of X-rays, up to $30 in X-rays for a fracture or $7.50 without a fracture.

Costs of tutoring up to a $1,000 total, with a $3 per hour maximum tutor salary, are provided after the fourth consecutive week of incapacity from a disabling injury. No such provision in any form was provided under last year's program.

Bicentennial unit to meet tonight

Schaumburg area community leaders have been asked to attend an organizational meeting tonight for the village's Bi-centennial Committee.

Under the leadership of village Trustee Raymond LeBeau the committee will work to plan the village commemoration of the nation's 200th birthday in 1976.

All civic, church and school organizations have been asked to send a representative to the meeting, which will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Great Hall, 231 S. Civic Dr., Schaumburg.

A SPRINKLING of antique and curio shops, with facades resembling the shops of yesteryear, line the main streets of Long Grove, which may grow because of the new road.

Walker's folly?

Gas station operator scoffs at highway proposal

by JOE SWICKARD
and BETTY LEE

Leonard Klaybor doesn't think Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed highway will ever be built. And if it ever is, Klaybor said he won't like it.

"The way I see it Walker is probably a good governor, but with Mayor Daley and the rest of his clowns running things, it won't get done," he said.

Klaybor is the manager of Leonard's Colonial Standard gas station at U.S. Rt. 12 and Quentin Road, just west of the village of Kildeer, a tiny Lake County town near Long Grove.

His service stationis several miles to the west of the proposed Interstate Highway Gov. Walker announced last week as his alternative to the Crosstown Expressway.

Klaybor will not be in the path of the new road, but he will definitely feel the effects. "If they build it, forget it for me. I'm dead," he said.

HIS STATION is just a year old. It is scrubbed, neat and well lighted. Klaybor has the kind of station that is pictured in magazine ads to illustrate the gasoline dealer as a neighborhood businessman.

"I'll just have to go under if they put an expressway here in the area. The only thing keeping me afloat now are those stoplights on the corner. If those cars go by at 80 or 90, I won't stand a chance. And if the road doesn't go by here, it'll drain off a lot of customers. I don't see how I can make it," he said above the highway noise.

"It's always been my dream to have my own station. But the way everything's going I might just as well close up and work for somebody else. It takes four to five years to get on your feet, if everything goes the way it should. But with gas shortages, company pressure and expressways, I just don't know. Do I have much invested? Just about $45,000 in loans and notes. I'm just scratching now, I don't know what'll happen."

The countryside through which the interstate would run is a pleasant jumble of truck farms, nurseries, massive estates and new weekend hideways.

The ground rolls gently with slight swells extending from the Wisconsin moraines to the north. The fields are bordered by thick groves of trees. Cardinals and jays dart through the stands of woods.

Gov. Walker put a $294 million price tag on the project. About $72 million of this is planned for land acquisition. The state figured a cost of $1.31 million per mile for acquiring the right-of-way. This comes out to about $37,400 an acre.

A spokesman for the state said the figures were "very, very rough guesstimates." The quality of the land and whether it is developed would affect the final cost, he said.

LONG GROVE stands apart from the usual Northwest suburb. A restored village as a commercial enterprise is reached by means of the blacktops off the highway.

THE RUSTIC covered bridge will soon stand beside Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed "Crosstown Alternative."

Poised to the south of the village is the improved extension of Rt. 53, the basis for the new interstate.

The manager of the Crossroads store in Long Grove is used to the idea of the concrete march through the town. A new improved Rt. 53 has been in the planning stage for years before Gov. Walker tagged it the alternative to the Crosstown.

"Most people here have resigned themselves to the idea of having this built. The village opposed it. It splits the village in half. But it won't affect the business district much," he said.

But the manager of Ginny's Gift Shop in Long Grove thinks the highway would provide a more direct route to the village.

"People have problems finding the place," she said of the asphalt cut-offs that row lead to town.

Nick Nohl drives a truck for the Elgin Paper Co. and he looks forward to the new road.

"It's really what we need to get us around the city, especially if you're a trucker. These areas are getting built up and the people need a road," he said.

Nohl, although he likes the governor's plans, is not satisfied. "We also need that crosstown road. It's rough driving through the streets downtown."

L. Koch owns 20 acres of farm land outside the village of Hawthorne Woods. He also operates a small produce stand on Old Higgins Road.

"Where the hell are they going to put it, I want to know. They should put it through the new homes. They are the ones who want it. Why should they cut up farm land? What's a person to do if he's got some acres over here and another little plot over there? You tell me. What the hell are they going to do?"

ALTHOUGH KOCH fears for himself and the other farmers in the area, the fields have steadily been giving way to developers for some time.

Marjorie Taylor works in the Ela Township Office, Lake Zurich, which encompasses part of the proposed route.

"The farmers are selling out all around here. They can't afford to farm here anymore on a small scale. Since the government cut back on the subsidies, the farmer is finding it pretty hard. Now they're cutting up the farms for the developers."

The new road would be west of the village, but Mrs. Taylor sees benefits in that. "It'll get the trucks out of town. We don't have room for them any more. They can just roll by us."

Mundelein straddles the path for the highway. The small businessman there looks to the future and likes what he foresees.

Some like Edd Miller are optimistic about the road and its benefits to his gas station.

"IT WOULD HELP this area considerably since there's not much going on. It'd help the area grow," he said.

He can already see growth. A Holiday Inn opened across the road just last month and a new shopping center is going up just down the road.

Miller's father Shirl manages the station for him and he makes no bones about his view of Walker's announcement, "We'd love it."

The northern extension of the anticipated interstate is about 20 miles from Long Grove up to Grayslake and then to the east. And feelings like the road itself, run both ways.

GOP asked employes for cash 'gifts'

by BOB LAHEY
and KURT BAER

Wheeling Township highway department employes were asked to contribute for membership in the Wheeling Township Republican Organization at a brief meeting at which their paychecks were distributed.

Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen confirmed to the Herald Friday he summoned his highway crew shortly before quitting time a week ago Friday. He said the purpose of the meeting, as in previous such meetings, was "to make announcements."

The announcements at this meeting included a call for volunteers to drive vehicles in the July 4 parade of the Prospect Heights Lions Club, and a request for memberships in the township GOP organization.

Olsen said that "it was maybe imprudent of me" to ask for memberships at the same time he handed out paychecks, but he emphasized that he informed the workers that the contributions were strictly voluntary.

BY THE FOLLOWING Monday, all the five full-time and eight part-time employes of the department had made contributions of $2 for single memberships or $3 for family memberships, Olsen said.

Another full-time employe, who had not yet contributed, was discharged the day following the membership announcement "for insubordination," Olsen said.

The highway commissioner declined to discuss the circumstances of the firing, on the advice of Township Attorney Richard A. Cowen, who also is Republican township committeeman.

The employe told the Herald he was fired following a dispute with Olsen after the employe saw an "unofficial car" leaving the township garage on Saturday evening. The employe, who had worked for the department for about three years, said he followed the car and did not know the driver was Olsen until Olsen parked at his residence.

HE SAID OLSEN told him he had been washing his car at the garage, and when the employe "stated the irregularity of the act," he was fired.

Olsen said he had been testing new car-washing equipment, recently installed, so that he could demonstrate it to department employes on Monday.

The employe made no charge that his discharge was related to the membership solicitation, and Olsen stated emphatically that it was not.

Olsen said he repeated the request for GOP memberships at the highway garage Monday and that all the employes contributed "except one man who said he had forgotten about it and asked if he could bring the money the next day." Olsen said he told the man the membership drive would be over by then, but that he would put the money in and the employe could pay him back later.

At that time, he said, only the fulltime employes were informed of the firing.

Cowen told the Herald it is "absolutely not" the policy to condition "employment, payment or promotions" of township employes on political contributions.

"IN RETROSPECT, (Olsen) was unwise in mentioning membership at a meeting at which paychecks were distributed," said Cowen. "But I'm sure that he is aware that the decision of an employe to participate or not can have absolutely no bearing on his employment."

Lawrence Carrozza, former highway commissioner who is still employed with the department, said in his 13 years with the department there had been no request of employes for contributions to the GOP organization, but he added that he saw nothing wrong in asking for membership dues on a voluntary basis.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she was "very, very surprised" that employes had been asked at work to contribute to the party and said it was "absolutely not" an acceptable recruitment practice.

Powder puff 'crackdown'

Most substandard buildings in Village still standing despite 14 months of warnings

by TOM VON MALDER

After 14 months, Mount Prospect's "crackdown" on substandard buildings has produced almost negligible results.

Of 16 buildings on the original "action" list, only four have had substantial repairs and one was demolished after a serious fire. Meanwhile, two other partially boarded-up buildings have become candidates for the list.

Village Trustee George B. Anderson, originator of the crackdown attempts, has blamed a "dialogue of procrastination" for delays in upgrading the buildings. Anderson, miffed by the small results of the program, said he may demand action soon from the village administration.

Building director Buell Dutton counters Anderson's ire by saying he has been too busy even to successfully track down all 16 property owners, some of whom are absentee landlords.

"I work an average of 60 hours a week just trying to keep up with the current work load," Dutton said. He is the only person available to check all plans and issue building permits for the millions of dollars worth of construction now going on in the village. An assistant, who would have reduced Dutton's work load considerably, quit recently because he did not want to provide background credentials.

DUTTON SAID he agrees with Anderson that the hazardous conditions included on the so-called "shoddy buildings" list are serious. "Sure, all of these things are important," he said, "but Mount Prospect might suffer if I were to drop everything else (to get to them)."

He said it might be more important for him to work on the building permits, delay of which costs contractors money, or to get a new, better building code adopted by the village than to "argue for an hour with someone to get weeds cut."

The list of substandard buildings was drawn up in April, 1972, after a windshield survey of the community. Anderson had asked for the survey because he believed the buildings represented a safety hazard. Defects listed include such things as overgrown weeds, lack of painting or needed structural repairs. In one case, garage doors were hanging off, but that was corrected.

Anderson has called "ridiculous" Dutton's repeated contention that more men would have to be hired for the building department if all listed hazards are to be taken care of. With only about 16 buildings, Anderson said Dutton should be able to take care of each without additional personnel.

MANPOWER ISN'T the only problem, Dutton said. He pointed out that most of the listed defects are not actual code violations.

"I can't order someone to paint," Dutton said, referring to an old barn near 600 W. Rand Rd. Since the barn was annexed after it was built, he said it can legally remain, although current codes would not permit its construction. Anderson called the barn a firetrap.

So far Dutton has sent out one series of letters asking the building owners to upgrade their properties. But some letters had to be sent to banks because they were the nearest thing to an owner that Dutton could find by going through tax rolls.

A second letter is in the works and Dutton has said he may eventually take some of the property owners into court, if there are code violations involved. He said the first such case, if it came to that, would be the abandoned home on the Old Orchard Country Club property, just north of the theater-restaurant on Schoenbeck Road.

DUTTON HAS asked Albert Newman, country club owner, to either fix up the building or have it torn down. Windows and doors on the brick house are broken. From visiting the house, it appears Mexican employes of the country club are living there.

Since broken doors and windows must be boarded up under state law, and then only as a temporary measure, Dutton said the Old Orchard building is in violation of the law. But Dutton added he has not acted quickly in this case because of the building's isolation, The situation

NEIGHBORS NEAR THIS vacant house at 501 N. Elmhurst Ave., Mount Prospect, consider the building a danger. There have been two small fires in the building over a year's time and some residents believe the house could be used by criminals as a hiding place. The house is on a village list as one of many to be upgraded or removed.

BROKEN WINDOWS, boarded doors, high weeds — these are some of the building defects a cleanup campaign in Mount Prospect is designed to eliminate. But because voluntary compliance is needed in most cases, cleanup efforts have been slowed.

MOUNT PROSPECT

Mount Prospect book readers apparently think reciprocal borrowing is a good idea.

Under the program, a library card at any one of more than 30 libraries enables a person to borrow a book from any of the other libraries. In June, only 164 books were borrowed from the Mount Prospect Public Library by "out-of-towners." Yet, during the same month, Mount Prospect residents went to other libraries to borrow 1,899 books.

Mount Prospect residents were second only to Skokie for use of the program in June.

Car catches fire; probe ordered

A car belonging to a Mount Prospect man caught fire in an alley near his home Saturday night, causing about $150 damage to the interior.

The auto, a 1963 Ford, belonged to W. Ray Martin, 433 S. Elmhurst. It had been parked with its windows open all day, according to fire officials' reports.

The damage resulted when the front seat caught fire. Because of the unusual pattern of the burn in the car, fire officials have placed the cause of the fire under investigation.

New Buick stolen

A 1973 Buick was stolen last week from Mufich Buick, 801 E. Rand Rd., Mount Prospect.

Police said the car, valued at $5,641.05, was taken between June 30 and last Tuesday.

A SATURDAY morning fire caused $2,500 damage to the Office Equipment Sales Co., 5 S. Pine St. Firemen said the blaze started in the rear of the building, burned up the back wall and through the roof. Cause of the fire was undetermined, but an investigation is continuing. (Photo by Jay Needleman) would be different, he said, if the building were endangering a neighborhood.

A house on Golf Road and another on Wille Street have been fixed up enough that they will be removed from the list. But the boarded-up Central School structure at Main Street and Central Road could easily be added.

Anderson pointed out a house on Rand Road near Randhurst that has been much improved. He said the yard has been cleaned of junk and new siding is being put on the house.

Yet the frame building that houses Hotter Than Mother's Music, Main Street and Northwest Highway, has become an eyesore in recent months, Anderson said. A fire recently damaged the building, causing parts of it to be boarded up. Now the record store reportedly is ready to move out and Dutton has declared the second floor apartment unsuitable for occupation.

OTHER BUILDINGS on the list, as given by Anderson, include:

- A vacant house at 501 N. Elmhurst Ave., which is partially boarded-up and had high weeds. A recent fire has caused concern among neighbors who believe the building is becoming a danger to them and their children. One man, who lives across the street, said he is afraid criminals may use the house as a hideout. There have been two attempted rapes in the neighborhood within the last month.
- The El Rando restaurant at Rand and Elmhurst roads. Long vacant, the building was torn down last year after a fire destroyed over half of it.
- A rented home at 1000 N. Elmhurst Rd., which needs porch repair and weeds cut.

$1,400 in jewelry, clothing stolen

More than $1,400 worth of jewelry, clothing and a tape recorder were reported stolen recently from a storage locker in an apartment building at 1320 S. Elmhurst Rd., Mount Prospect.

The burglary from Nimmi T. Hirani's locker took place between June 20 and July 5, police said. Twenty-five neckties and six dresses were among the stolen articles.

Girl, 9, injured by smoke bomb

A 9-year-old Mount Prospect girl was injured slightly Thursday afternoon when she was struck by a smoke bomb.

Police said Linda S. Sarwer, 1818 Catalpa Ln., was treated for blisters on the right shoulder. She had been playing at John Jay Schoo', 1835 W. Pheasant Tr., when the incident occurred.

According to police, a youth threw the smoke bomb. He was turned over to the juvenile department.

Des Plaines DAMP pullout 'won't hurt': Teichert

Mount Prospect should not be affected by Des Plaines' withdrawal from DAMP.

This was the reaction of Mayor Robert D. Teichert last week when he learned of the Des Plaines City Council's unanimous decision to pull out of the four-community water commission.

"It doesn't change anything," Teichert said. "It's still a feasible plan." The plan he referred to is the idea of acquiring an independent water supply for the member communities. When formed 15 years ago, DAMP consisted of Mount Prospect, Des Plaines, Arlington Heights and Palatine.

Teichert said he feels fairly confident that Des Plaines' place in the commission may soon be filled by one or more other communities in the Northwest Municipal Conference. He said he had read that Hoffman Estates may be interested.

DES PLAINES will renew its 10-year water contract with the City of Chicago.

DAMP's efforts to secure an independent water line have been successful, then unsuccessful. For a while, DAMP had an allocation for Lake Michigan water, but then a lawsuit filed by the Metropolitan Sanitary District forced all allocations to be thrown out.

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Lloyd Van Dusen ordered the state to rehold hearings and reset the water allocations.

DAMP chairman Robert Teepe said he felt Des Plaines withdrew because the council did not want to incur any future costs. He said the water line for the other three communities will still be the goal.

"We would have liked to keep Des Plaines. The more merrier," he said. "But we have had our engineering studies done with and without Des Plaines. With all four suburbs, the water line would be 72 inches and without Des Plaines it would be 62 inches."

TEEPE SAID as far as he knows DAMP is not going to take any legal action to keep Des Plaines a member.

A new commission may be formed with just the three suburbs or maybe the remaining members of DAMP will unite with Tree Towns water commission (Elmhurst, Villa Park, Lombard), Teepe said.

"To my knowledge the other cities are supporting our legislation and we are prepared to try and get another water allocation. As far as having Des Plaines dropping out, we more or less expected this," Teepe said.

Teichert confirmed Mount Prospect would continue to support DAMP. He added that the village's need for a new water source is not as pressing as some of the other nearby communities. Mount Prospect's water needs, he said, will be met through this decade.

GOP asked employes for 'gifts' of cash

by BOB LAHEY
and KURT BAER

Wheeling Township highway department employes were asked to contribute for membership in the Wheeling Township Republican Organization at a brief meeting at which their paychecks were distributed.

Township Highway Comr. Arthur Olsen confirmed to the Herald Friday he summoned his highway crew shortly before quitting time a week ago Friday. He said the purpose of the meeting, as in previous such meetings, was "to make announcements."

The announcements at this meeting included a call for volunteers to drive vehicles in the July 4 parade of the Prospect Heights Lions Club, and a request for memberships in the township GOP organization.

Olsen said that "it was maybe imprudent of me" to ask for memberships at the same time he handed out paychecks, but he emphasized that he informed the workers that the contributions were strictly voluntary.

BY THE FOLLOWING Monday, all the five full-time and eight part-time employes of the department had made contributions of $2 for single memberships or $3 for family memberships, Olsen said.

Another full-time employe, who had not yet contributed, was discharged the day following the membership announcement "for insubordination," Olsen said.

The highway commissioner declined to discuss the circumstances of the firing, on the advice of Township Attorney Richard A. Cowen, who also is Republican township committeeman.

The employe told the Herald he was fired following a dispute with Olsen after the employe saw an "unofficial car" leaving the township garage on Saturday evening. The employe, who had worked for the department for about three years, said he followed the car and did not know the driver was Olsen until Olsen parked at his residence.

HE SAID OLSEN told him he had been washing his car at the garage, and when the employe "stated the irregularity of the act," he was fired.

Olsen said he had been testing new car-washing equipment, recently installed, so that he could demonstrate it to department employes on Monday.

The employe made no charge that his discharge was related to the membership solicitation, and Olsen stated emphatically that it was not.

Olsen said he repeated the request for GOP memberships at the highway garage Monday and that all the employes contributed "except one man who said he had forgotten about it and asked if he could bring the money the next day." Olsen said he told the man the membership drive would be over by then, but that he would put the money in and the employe could pay him back later.

At that time, he said, only the fulltime employes were informed of the firing.

Cowen told the Herald it is "absolutely not" the policy to condition "employment, payment or promotions" of township employes on political contributions.

"IN RETROSPECT, (Olsen) was unwise in mentioning membership at a meeting at which paychecks were distributed," said Cowen. "But I'm sure that he is aware that the decision of an employe to participate or not can have absolutely no bearing on his employment."

Walker's folly?

Gas station operator scoffs at highway proposal

by JOE SWICKARD
and BETTY LEE

Leonard Klaybor doesn't think Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed highway will ever be built. And if it ever is, Klaybor said he won't like it.

"The way I see it Walker is probably a good governor, but with Mayor Daley and the rest of his clowns running things, it won't get done," he said.

Klaybor is the manager of Leonard's Colonial Standard gas station at U.S. Rt. 12 and Quentin Road, just west of the village of Kildeer, a tiny Lake County town near Long Grove.

His service stationis several miles to the west of the proposed Interstate Highway Gov. Walker announced last week as his alternative to the Crosstown Expressway.

Klaybor will not be in the path of the new road, but he will definitely feel the effects. "If they build it, forget it for me. I'm dead," he said.

HIS STATION is just a year old. It is scrubbed, neat and well lighted. Klaybor has the kind of station that is pictured in magazine ads to illustrate the gasoline dealer as a neighborhood businessman.

"I'll just have to go under if they put an expressway here in the area. The only thing keeping me afloat now are those stoplights on the corner. If those cars go by at 80 or 90, I won't stand a chance. And if the road doesn't go by here, it'll drain off a lot of customers. I don't see how I can make it," he said above the highway noise.

"It's always been my dream to have my own station. But the way everything's going I might just as well close up and work for somebody else. It takes four to five years to get on your feet, if everything goes the way it should. But with gas shortages, company pressure and expressways, I just don't know. Do I have much invested? Just about $45,000 in loans and notes. I'm just scratching now, I don't know what'll happen."

The countryside through which the interstate would run is a pleasant jumble of truck farms, nurseries, massive estates and new weekend hideways.

The ground rolls gently with slight swells extending from the Wisconsin moraines to the north. The fields are bordered by thick groves of trees. Cardinals and jays dart through the stands of woods.

Gov. Walker put a $294 million price tag on the project. About $72 million of this is planned for land acquisition. The state figured a cost of $1.31 million per mile for acquiring the right-of-way. This comes out to about $37,400 an acre.

A spokesman for the state said the figures were "very, very rough guesstimates." The quality of the land and whether it is developed would affect the final cost, he said.

LONG GROVE stands apart from the usual Northwest suburb. A restored village as a commercial enterprise is reached by means of the blacktops off the highway.

Poised to the south of the village is the improved extension of Rt. 53, the basis for the new interstate.

The manager of the Crossroads store in Long Grove is used to the idea of the concrete march through the town. A new improved Rt. 53 has been in the planning stage for years before Gov. Walker tagged it the alternative to the Crosstown.

"Most people here have resigned themselves to the idea of having this built. The village opposed it. It splits the village in half. But it won't affect the business district much," he said.

But the manager of Ginny's Gift Shop in Long Grove thinks the highway would provide a more direct route to the village.

"People have problems finding the place," she said of the asphalt cut-offs that now lead to town.

Westgate School principal

She's not really 'retiring'

by BETTY LEE

Talk about retirement and Mrs. Helen Castor shudders.

Although she is leaving Westgate School this summer after 16 years of being principal she had kept the word "retirement" from sprouting into the "this is my last year" blues. "I thought I'd keep quiet and finish this year as in any other year," she said.

But the year marks an end to nearly two decades in Arlington Heights School Dist. 25, of watching Westgate grow from a one-story wing to a multi-level building, and seeing thousands of children grasp the skills to read and write during their early years.

"One of the biggest changes over the years was the availability of teachers," said Mrs. Castor. "There was a time when you didn't have enough teachers and always felt relieved to have a full staff when school started. Before, we interviewed teachers. Now they are interviewing us."

The school administrative philosophy has changed dramatically, she said.

"IT HAS CHANGED from a little to a big school system. I wanted to be involved with the problems in the school, to have a role in solving these problems. Many things were done alike in all the schools. If you didn't know how to approach something, you looked it up in the manual the school administrators prepared.

"Now you don't do things uniformly. Maybe there's a richness in the variety of solution. Teachers had to change. They used to be told to teach this or that. And I had to decide on things. There's no big superpower telling you what to do. You have to take the responsibilities."

Mrs. Castor came to the school district in 1953 and taught kindergarten classes at Ridge School. Four years later she continued teaching kindergarten, but at Westgate School where she was also principal.

A graduate of Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., Mrs. Castor taught high school English and physical education for ten years. She returned to college for more studies, this time for kindergarten education.

WITH INNOVATIONS in classrooms today, such as multi-age classes, transitional new math and reading programs are kids different today than they were 20 years ago?

"Kids don't change that much," she said. "I think television has been both harmful and helpful. Violence on television has made some difference in values kids hold. They accept violence as a way of life.

"Actually, this is an exciting time in education," she continued. "Materials have been more attractive in schools because it has to compete with television. Now the child dares you to stimulate him — he's accustomed to the high appeal of television.

Multi-age grouping — the combining of first-and second-grade students in a classroom — has met approval with Mrs. Castor, who has kept an open, but critical eye on education.

"Surprisingly it (multi-age grouping) has taken a great deal of pressure off first-graders. They feel less pressured to perform what is the preconceived level," she said.

THE CHILD WHO performs at a lower level, or at a slower pace, will not be apt to develop a low concept of himself, knowing that the students who are doing better are probably older and in the upper grade, she explained.

"Some children just need to build some confidence in themselves," said Mrs. Castor. "For example, one of the older ones in the group can help some younger child. They really blossom out."

"The thing that gets in the way in learning is the child's own concept of himself," she said. "The system expects the child to read by first grade and so on, and the child can't get off the pattern. The expectations are unrealistic.

"I agree with Martin Mayer (an education writer who, in 1961, wrote "The Schools")," she said. "What was the point in pushing these kids along? And what about the kid who wasn't ready to go ahead? I can't see where they are going to be ahead. Early reading doesn't mean they'll love learning. There's no correlation — it's just the skill, so what's the difference if a kid learns to read at age five or seven?"

AND ALONG WITH multi-age grouping the teachers do a great deal more by allowing the child to follow his own interests, according to Mrs. Castor.

"From a supervisor's point of view, I used to be concerned with each teacher. Was she programming everything right? Did the child have a productive day — was he busy all day?

"Now you have to look at things from the children's point of view. They must learn how to learn. Of course you need basic skills, I'm not saying we don't need them, but there's so much knowledge in the world. You have to inspire a love for learning, a thirst for knowledge."

The teacher has to take the responsibility for the child to learn what he is interested in, she added. The planning is harder than to just open a book and say "this is what we are going to learn."

Retirement from Westgate School does not mean abstinence from education for Mrs. Castor, who plans to include herself in "seasonal, short-term involvement" in the future.

She and her husband, Pat, who had retired from the superintendent post for Palatine-Rolling Meadows School Dist. 15, three years ago, are making plans to travel. But at this moment schools and children take predominant position in her plans. "I don't know what it's going to be, but nobody needs to be uninvolved nowadays," she said.

MANY CHANGES in Arlington Heights School Dist. 25 have occurred during the 16-year career that Mrs. Helen Castor served as principal at Westgate School. Despite the changes, Mrs. Castor, who retires this summer from the district, firmly believes in children "learning to learn."

Beltline roadway plan Walker's folly?

new road.

"It's really what we need to get us around the city, especially if you're a trucker. These areas are getting built up and the people need a road," he said.

Nohl, although he likes the governor's plans, is not satisfied. "We also need that crosstown road. It's rough driving through the streets downtown."

L. Koch owns 20 acres of farm land outside the village of Hawthorne Woods. He also operates a small produce stand on Old Higgins Road.

"Where the hell are they going to put it, I want to know. They should put it through the new homes. They are the ones who want it. Why should they cut up farm land? What's a person to do if he's got some acres over here and another little plot over there? You tell me. What the hell are they going to do?"

ALTHOUGH KOCH fears for himself and the other farmers in the area, the fields have steadily been giving way to developers for some time.

Marjorie Taylor works in the Ela Township Office, Lake Zurich, which encompasses part of the proposed route.

"The farmers are selling out all around here. They can't afford to farm here anymore on a small scale. Since the government cut back on the subsidies, the farmer is finding it pretty hard. Now they're cutting up the farms for the developers."

The new road would be west of the village, but Mrs. Taylor sees benefits in that. "It'll get the trucks out of town. We don't have room for them any more. They can just roll by us."

Mundelein straddles the path for the highway. The small businessman there looks to the future and likes what he foresees.

Some like Edd Miller are optimistic about the road and its benefits to his gas station.

commissioner who is still employed with the department, said in his 13 years with the department there had been no request of employes for contributions to the GOP organization, but he added that he saw nothing wrong in asking for membership dues on a voluntary basis.

Ethel Kolerus, township supervisor, said she was "very, very surprised" that employes had been asked at work to contribute to the party and said it was "absolutely not" an acceptable recruitment practice.

Yankee Doodle Dandy enlarged its parking lot.

We estimate that our vast new blacktop area could hold General Washington's entire supply train after the Battle of Trenton in 1776.

If memory serves, this good general's supply train consisted of 26 wagons each drawn by two oxen, 19 carts and assorted carriages.

Probably the Continental Army's supply train won't be at the Arlington Hts. Yankee Doodle. But we hope you will be coming often and enjoy our new expanded parking facilities and Yankee Doodle's U.S. Choice Roast Beef, or the broadshouldered Dandy Burger. Yankee Doodle has a lot for you.
